Veto of Anti-Red Bill Overridden by House; Debate Delays Senate

Vote of 286 to 48 Polled Within Hour After Truman Calls Measure 'Mistake'

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman vetoed the Communist control bill yesterday, and within an hour the House voted to override him.

The Senate had the votes to do likewise and make the bill a law, but oratory by foes of the legislation was delaying action early today.

Mr. Truman, in a 3500-word veto message that went to Congress at 4 p. m., said that the McCarran-Wood bill was "a terrible mistake" that would "help the Communists, not . . . hurt them." He said that it contained "hysterical provisions," that it put the Government into "the thought control business," and that it would "make a mockery of the Bill of Rights and of our claims to stand for freedom in the world."

The President was especially indignant over Section 5, which he said would require the Pentagon to publish a catalogue of defense plants, thus giving spies and saboteurs hard-to-get information on "a silver platter."

He even sent along a personal note to Senators and Representatives asking them to consider his message "very carefully" before acting on his veto.

The House, however, was eager to override him, and it did so by the lopsided vote of 286 to 48—63 votes more than the two thirds required. Voting to override were 161 Democrats and 125 Republicans. The 48 who voted to sustain the veto included 45 Democrats; two Republicans, Representatives Burdick of North Dakota and Javits of New York, and Representative Marcantonio, American Labor Party, New York.

Mr. Truman's action of addressing a personal note to the lawmakers was unprecedented so far as anybody at the White House could recall. Copies of the note, bearing a facsimile of the President's signature, were distributed among the members along with copies of the veto message. The appeal said:

"I earnestly urge every member of the Congress to read and consider this message very carefully before he votes on the question of the passage of this bill over the veto."

There were cries of "Vote! Vote!" as soon as the House pages had distributed the message, but Speaker Rayburn directed George Maurer, the reading clerk, to read the message before ordering a roll call.

Mr. Truman's extraordinary appeal swayed some House members, but not many. The 286-48 vote was only slightly less deci-

ECA Chief Gets Important Post

PAUL G. HOFFMAN

Paul Hoffman To Head Ford Foundation

ECA Director's Post Slated to Be Given Deputy Chief Foster

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter
(Copyright 1950 by The Washington Post)

The twin appointments of Paul G. Hoffman as head of the enormous Ford Foundation, and of William C. Foster to succeed Hoffman as Marshall Plan chief will soon be announced, it was learned yesterday.

Hoffman, himself the former president of the Studebaker Corp., was persuaded by Henry Ford II to take the new job of directing the multi-million dollar research, educational and philantnropic organization.

The Ford Foundation, reputed to be the world's richest, more heavily endowed even than the Rockefeller and Carnegie Foundations, was set up by grants from Henry Ford, his wife and his son, Edsel. It has not yet started to function in its chosen fields to any great extent.

It was not learned when the new appointments will take effect.

For some months, Foster, the Deputy Economic Cooperation administrator, has been acting head of the agency, during a long recuperation by Hoffman from an operation. Now fully recovered, Hoffman returned to his post a few weeks ago. He is soon to leave for a three weeks inspection tour of ECA operations in Europe.

Hoffman, now 59, had a meteoric rise in the automobile industry, becoming president of Studebaker in 1935. He resigned in 1948 to become the first head of the Marshall Plan. Previously, he had been instrumental in founding and directing the Committee for Economic Development, progressive businessmen's research and policy organization.

Like Hoffman, Foster also was active in the CED, and was also in on the ECA at its inception.

Foster's first Marshall Plan post was as deputy to W. Averell Harriman, the ECA roving ambassador in Europe. He returned to Washington from his Paris headquarters in 1949 to become Hoffman's deputy.

Foster, who is 53, was born in Westfield, N. J. He was trained as an engineer and has worked as an official of a machinery manufacturing company of which he became president in 1946.

He was an Air Force pilot in World War I and held high executive posts in the War Department during World War II. In 1946 he became Undersecretary of Commerce, leaving that job to join ECA.

Soft-spoken and even tempered, Foster has gained the reputation of being a topnotch administrator, too. His background is about equally divided between operations of the agency overseas and in Washington.

Program for Recess Just After Midnight Is Upset; Filibuster Threat Is Voiced

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Eighty-first Congress adjournment plans threatened to collapse early today as a group of liberal Senators opened a talkathon to uphold President Truman's veto of the McCarran-Woods anti-Communist bill.

As their speeches continued into the early morning, Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) filed a motion to "reconsider" a previously passed adjournment resolution.

Parliamentarians said this was a filibuster-breaking move designed to hold Congress in session until the vote on the veto, but the anti-Red bill Senators denied they were "filibustering."

They nonetheless continued to talk.

Counting on adjourning today until November 27, the House called it quits for the night at 5:28 p. m. after passing the 4.7 billion-dollar tax bill and overriding the President's Red bill veto.

By a voice vote the House passed a resolution providing for the final curtain fall today, and agreed to come back at noon for the formal closing.

Senate Charges Plan

The Senate quickly passed the Saturday adjournment resolution messaged over by the House, but with this gimmick: It decided to stay in session until after midnight to meet the Saturday timetable, then sign off until November ahead of the House.

Senators reserved night rail and plane seats out of town after speeding the tax bill to the White House and squaring off for what looked like a speedy vote on the anti-Red bill veto.

At this point (6:35 p. m.), Senate Democratic liberals opened fire at the McCarran-Wood bill and taken-for-granted preparations for a quick over-rider were imperiled.

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), one of the seven Senators who originally voted against the McCarran bill, opened the fight. He complained the Senate was never informed of one of the main points in the President's message—that the bill required public listing of defense plants.

Humphrey, Lehman Speak

Some fireworks enlivened the discussion. Kefauver was taken from his feet when he quoted a newspaper columnist's reference to charges by Senator Andrew F. Schoeppel (R. Kans.) against Interior Secretary Oscar Chapman.

Senator William Langer (R. N. Dak.) accused Kefauver of vio-

Income Tax Rises Oct. 1; Bill Passed

Excess Profits Levy Will Be Considered By House Committee While Houses Recess

By the United Press

Congress overwhelmingly passed the tax increase bill yesterday and sent it to President Truman as a first step toward meeting the huge cost of rearming to thwart Communist aggression.

The measure, which hikes income and corporation taxes, is expected to raise between $4,500,000,000 and $4,700,000,000 in new revenue annually.

Effective October 1, it takes a 15 to 18 percent bigger bite out of withholding taxes on wages and salaries, after exemptions for dependents. This boost, estimated to raise $2,745,000,000 annually, will mean 40 cents a week in higher taxes for a $50-a-week worker with a wife and one child. The higher the salary, the higher the deduction.

Corporation taxes also will be increased by an average of 15 percent, retroactive to include half of 1950 income, for an estimated revenue increase of $1,500,000,000 a year.

Business firms will be called on for an even bigger contribution later this year. The lawmakers are pledged to pass an excess profits tax when they return in late November. This is expected to tap war-swollen industry profits for an extra four billion dollars to six billion dollars annually. It will be retroactive either to the last half or last quarter of 1950.

Both tax measures are aimed to meet, as far as possible, Mr. Truman's plea to finance Korean war and rearmament costs on a "pay-as-we-go" basis. Combined, however, they fall far short of the 17 billion dollars in extra money appropriated since the Korean war began. And Mr. Truman has said rearmament costs will mount to 30 billion dollars next year and more thereafter.

First the House, then the Senate, stamped final approval on the revenue-raising measure, which will bring the Korean war directly to the pocketbook level of nearly every taxpayer.

The House vote was 328 to 7. Voting against it were four Democrats, Representatives Fred Marshall (Minn.), Pat Sutton (Tenn.), Cecil F. White (Calif.), and Compton L. White (Idaho); two Republicans, Representatives Noah M. Mason (Ill.) and Robert F. ("where will they get the money" Rich (Pa.); and Republican Vito Marcantonio (A.L.P., N. Y.).

House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Mass.) renewed the demand for an excess profits tax as soon as Congress returns. Representative Herman P. Eberharter (D., Pa.), said yesterday's bill binds both Houses "completely" to pass such a measure later this year.

The House Ways and Means Committee scheduled a meeting today to begin work on the excess profits bill. The Treasury also is working on an Administration version and will have it ready by October 1.

In addition to hiking individual and corporation income taxes, the bill sent to the White House imposes a 10 percent excise tax on television receivers to bring in 55 million dollars a year; taxes life insurance companies 122 million dollars a year on their 1948, 1949 and 1950 incomes, and closes various "loopholes" in existing tax laws.

Autumn Bows In, Daylight Time Out, Weather Is Fine

This is to remind you of three things:

That summer officially ends at 10:44 a.m. today.

That you should turn back your clocks when you go to bed tonight (Daylight Saving Time ends at 2 a.m Sunday).

That you can leave your raincoats and umbrellas in the closet over the weekend. We're gonna have FAIR weather.

Today will be "mostly sunny and warmer," announced the weatherman, with the high in the middle 70s. He expects fair weather Sunday, too.

The Weather Bureau's five-day forecast, extending through next Wednesday, said the temperature in this area will be a little below normal for the period—the normal high for Washington is 75 and the normal low is 55. Rain is likely about Tuesday, probably totaling one-quarter to one-half an inch.

Ban on Assistance To Lands Sending Munitions Behind Iron Curtain Relaxed

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday passed the 17-billion-dollar emergency appropriation bill after accepting a House substitute for its own stringent ban on economic aid to countries exporting munitions behind the Iron Curtain.

Providing 16 billion dollars to strengthen the military defense of this country and its allies, the measure now goes to the White House.

Action of the House substitute for the controversial Wherry amendment prohibiting aid to nations shipping munitions to Russia and its satellites was by voice vote with Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.) registering a lone dissent. Previously the Senate, by a vote of 39 to 28, had rejected a substitute offered by Wherry which stated his previous amendment in different terms.

Both Wherry amendments would have placed a flat prohibition on economic aid to countries exporting arms or implements of war to the Soviet bloc. The Secretary of Defense would have been directed to designate what commodities of a general nature should be included in the ban as being capable of being converted into arms or useful in their manufacture.

Power to Security Council

The House substitute, which was finally adopted, provides that the National Security Council should designate all materials or commodities whose export would be banned. Proposed by the Administration and introduced in the House by Chairman Cannon (D., Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee, the substitute in effect reiterates a provision already in the Economic Cooperation Act, with one exception. It places determination of the commodities and materials to be banned in the hands of the Council headed by the President rather than in the hands of the Economic Coordination administrator.

Just before the final vote on the substitute, Senator Lyndon Johnson (D., Tex.) warned the Senate that the funds provided in the bill would now buy considerably less than when estimates on which the bill was based were submitted by the armed services. In some cases, he said, prices were rising at the rate of 1 percent a month, threatening to increase the cost of some complex items, such as aircraft, as much as 24 percent.

Long Discussion Results

The interest his statements aroused on the Republican side of the Senate launched a protracted late-hour colloquy which subsided only when Chairman McKellar (D., Tenn.) of the Senate Appropriations Committee pleaded for action on the bill.

McKellar told the Senate the United States at this period in its history needed friends and said no friends would be made or held by what he termed a dictatorial attitude. He urged accentance of the House substitute for "diplomatic" reasons.

Nonstop Jet Pilot Lands in U. S.; Second Bails Out in Labrador

LIMESTONE, Me., Sept. 22 (U.P.)—An American jet fighter tonight completed the first nonstop trans-Atlantic flight by a jet-propelled plane.

But the plane and a second jet failed in an attempt to fly nonstop from London to New York by refueling in the air. The pilot of one ship bailed out over Labrador and the other was forced to land here.

The jet which landed at Limestone, however, was the first to span the Atlantic nonstop. A United States twin Mustang flew 4916 miles nonstop from Honolulu to New York in 1947 for the longest fighter plane flight in history.

Lieut. Col. William D. Ritchie, 31, of 729 Monticello dr., Falls Church, Va., pilot of one of the planes, ran out of fuel 100 miles northeast of Goose Bay. He tried to glide the remaining distance, but failed.

Twenty miles from his goal he jumped. He landed safely by parachute on the shore between Sandy Point and Northwest River, where he was picked up by helicopter.

Col. David C. Schilling, 31, of 3527 N. Edison st., Arlington, Va., pilot of the other ship, landed at Limestone Air Force Base, more than an hour overdue on his 3300-mile flight. Bad weather forced him to change the flight plans, which called for a landing at Mitchel Field, N. Y.

Schilling's plane made the flight from London in 10 hours and 1 minute.

Today's flight was the pilots' second attempt. The first was Monday, but they were forced to return when high winds over Scotland damaged their refueling equipment.

The first refueling for the fighters took place over Prestwick, Scotland, where an RAF Lancaster tanker plane, flying above and slightly ahead of the jets, dropped a line to their tanks.

Other in-air refueling spots for the jets were over Keflavik, Iceland, and Goose Bay, Labrador.

Moch, Hating Both Reds And Germans, Has Key Role on Use of Ex-Foe

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The timing of German rearmament depended to a large extent today on a French political leader whose son was tortured to death by the Nazis.

The Frenchman was Jules Moch, the energetic and hard-driving Minister of Defense who has been more responsible than any one man for the French Government's refusal to let German units be used in a combined Western army.

Moch was the central figure in two long meetings of the Foreign Ministers and Defense Ministers of France, Britain and the United States this morning and afternoon. Gen. George C. Marshall was present in his new role as Secretary of Defense.

The Ministers had many questions to clear up and many details to settle concerning the American program of: (1) Creating a combined army of the West under a single commander. (2) Stationing more American troops in Europe as part of such a force, anda (3) Ultimately using German

President Pins 5-Star Insignia On Gen. Bradley

President Truman pinned the five-star insignia of a General of the Army on the uniform of Omar N. Bradley yesterday.

A special White House ceremony was arranged to honor promotion of the tall, slender "GI's general" to the Nation's highest military rank.

Congress authorized the promotion in legislation rushed through early this week.

The ceremony was attended by Cabinet members, congressional leaders, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and members of Bradley's immediate family.

Five-star rank is conferred by Congress for life, and entitles the holder to remain technically on active duty, drawing full salary and other perquisites amounting to about $18,000 a year, even after leaving actual service.

Jet Just Misses Setting New Cross-Country Mark

LANGLEY AIR FORCE BASE, Va., Sept. 22 (AP).—An Air Force B-45 jet bomber flew across the country today and just missed setting a record.

Three World War II fliers brought the four-engine plane from March Field, Calif., to Langley Field in four hours and six minutes.

The record, held by a B-477 four-engined jet bomber, is a shade under four hours. Air Force spokesmen here said today's flight was "a routine training flight."

Suwon Captured With Its Airstrip; Flamethrowers In Use at Capital

By Don Huth

TOKYO (Saturday), Sept. 23 (AP).—United States Cavalry troopers today broke 35 miles beyond the old southeast Korean defense lines, threatening large-scale entrapment of retreating Reds bound for the battle of Seoul.

The battle raged grimly and indecisively around Seoul itself as the cavalry breakout forces junction only 85 air miles from United States infantry already in control of Suwon. Suwon and its air field are 20 miles south of Seoul.

Associated Press Correspondent Hal Boyle reported a task force of the First United States Cavalry reached Sangju, 43 air miles northwest of Taegu. Taegu served for a time as the main frontline base on the southeast front.

Cut Road of Red Retreat

By entering Sangju, the dismounted cavalrymen cut the second best road of retreat from South Korea to the Seoul front fr three enemy divisions. The three divisions, the First, Third and thirteenth, had tried earlier this month to overwhelm Taegu.

In their swift drive, First Cavalry tanks fired on enemy troops trying to escape and destroyed a column of 50 trucks, Boyle said.

Apparently referring to the same action, an Eighth Army communique said two tanks and 40 trucks in a convoy were destroyed or damaged and several hundred enemy troops were killed.

The Cavalry had crossed the broad Naktong—which Red rearguards had been expected to defend bitterly—in order to enter Sangju.

Earlier, a First Corps spokesman on this front had announced there was no evidence the enemy was trying to form a defense line.

The main highway from the southeast front to Seoul already was barred by the United States seventh division.

Lunging out from the Inchun-Seoul, the 7th punched more than 20 miles and seized Suwon and its airfield. It was astride the main highway at Suwon.

Hold Outside Seoul Tighter

United States Marines steadily expanded their hold on Seoul's outksirts but the enemy offered stiffening resistance from strong positions within the city proper.

The North Korean Red radio said, without confirmation elsewhere, that the Communists' garrison of Seoul had beaten off a tank-led attempt to enter the capital proper.

Finch's Transfer Liquidates 'Feud' With Gen. Cramer

The Pentagon "Cramer-Finch feud," which hampered National Guard business for many months during the past year, finally was liquidated yesterday.

Orders were issued by the Air Force transferring Maj. Gen. George C. Finch, chief of the Air Force Division of the National Guard Bureau, and one of the participants, to another post.

Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, the other party to the bitter brass hat battle, bowed out two weeks ago, when his Forty-third Infantry Division was mobilized for Federal service.

Cramer was chief of the National Guard Bureau of the Department of the Army.

Finch's stand was that he was put into his post by Air Force orders and USAF policies should control his actions. Cramer insisted that Finch was merely his assistant and he made the decisions.

Finch was reassigned yesterday to the office of Maj. Gen. Earl S. Hoag, special assistant for reserve forces at Air Force headquarters. No replacement has been ordered for him.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22 (U.P.)—Former President Herbert Hoover was "up and around today and feeling much better" after suffering a gall bladder attack Sunday.

Other Outrages Reported

Vicar General in Korea Slain By Reds Demanding His Home

The Rev. Thomas Ri, Vicar General of Seoul, has been executed by North Korean Communists, the National Catholic Welfare Conference has been informed in a report from Taegu.

Father Ri was executed when he refused to yield the home of Bishop Paul Ro, whom he recently replaced as Vicar General of the Vicariate Apostolic of Seoul, the report stated.

Father George Carroll, an American Maryknoll priest in Taegu, said that when Father Ri refused to place the home at the disposal of the Reds, a Communist officer forced him into a field and shot him.

The execution was only one of many reports indicating widespread suffering by Catholics in South Korea. Lucy Pang, Catholic principal of one of the largest girls' high schools in Seoul, has been reported killed by the Reds. She was one of five high school principals who visited the United States in 1948 on an inspection tour of American educational institutions.

Sisters and novices of the St. Paul of Chartres convent in Seoul, according to one report, were ordered by the Reds to march up and down near the convent and orphanage where Red troops were billeted in an attempt to prevent bombing by United Nations forces.

Several unconfirmed reports have reached Washington indicating that Msgr. Thomas Quinland, Columban missionary and Prefect Apostolic of Choonchun, and the Rev. James P. Maginn, Columban missionery of Butte, Mont., were both killed by the Communists. They were working in an area just below the Thirty-eighth Parallel.

Extensive destruction of church property has been reported by Father Carroll. The Catholic church in Andong completed only six months ago, has been destroyed. The church at Ko Chang in North Kyung Sang Province has likewise been ruined.

In addition, many Catholic institutions were taken over forcibly by the Reds as troop billets. This includes the Catholic Seminary and the Eastern Star Catholic Boys High School in Seoul.

The Catholic Church at Chinju has been reportedly commandeered by the Reds as an office, as have the priest's rectory and Sisters' Convent.

Bombing by Allied planes has also taken its toll of Catholic churches and institutions. The Catholic Girls' High School in Seoul and the Cathedral parish auditorium were damaged and the entire compound at Wonsan in South Ching Chung Province, including the church, rectory, boys' high school and convent, have been reported destroyed by bombing and subsequent fires.

Nobel Peace Prize Awarded U. N. Mediator Ralph J. Bunche

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

Dr. Ralph Johnson Bunche, American statesman and educator, has been awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for 1950, it was announced yesterday in Oslo by the Nobel Prize Committee of the Norwegian Parliament.

The 46-year-old United Nations official, eleventh American and first Negro to be so honored, received the award in recognition of his work as mediator in the Arab-Israeli war in Palestine.

Bunche will receive the award in Oslo, December 19, anniversary of the death of Alfred Nobel, inventor of dynamite.

Four other Nobel awards—those for medicine, chemistry, physics and literature—will be announced in late October and November.

Last year's winner of the peace prize—a gold medal and then $1,889.30 — was Lord John Boyd Orr, a Scot who headed the U. N.'s Food and Agriculture Organization.

Bunche, whose life is an American success story, is top ranking director of the U. N.'s Division of Trusteeship. Coming to Washington in 1928 as a Howard University faculty member, and later joining the State Department, he

States and Industries Join In Steps to Clean Up Potomac

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

OAKLAND, Md., Sept. 22.—They are at long last really doing something to clean up the beautiful but polluted Potomac River.

The Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin meeting here today and Saturday, heard about several long steps being taken to remove some of the wastes that poison George Washington's favorite stream. It was the most optimistic report the Commission has listened to in its nine years of listening.

All this doesn't mear that it will be safe to swim in the Potomac at the 14th st. bridge by next June, or that you may safely eat a fish pulled out of it. But it means a movement in the right direction.

Two industries and the Government combined to make the pleasant report. They revealed that:

1. The West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company at Luke, Md., one of the two worst industrial offenders in the upper Potomac River area, is spending $1,500,000 on a chemical recovery program. This means a change in processes that will greatly reduce, perhaps by more than half, the waste now being discharged into the river by this plant.

Yanks Sweep North To Cut Red Retreat

dug in for a street-by-street fight and lobbed mortar fire at Marines on "You-Can-Have-It" hill overlooking the sprawling metropolis of one million.

Red Resistance Increases

Enemy resistance was increasing. There was every evidence the Reds have a planned defense for Seoul.

The Reds' Pyongyang radio, which hitherto admitted only the September 15 landing at Inchon, said today at 7 a. m. (6 p. m., EDT Friday):

"Red troops defending Seoul repulsed tank-led and air-supported American troops which attempted to penetrate into the Korean capital."

Expansion of the Marine hold on the outskirts was reported in the first communique issued by the United States Tenth Corps. It said Marines on the northwest outskirts occupied high ground overlooking a suburb, and other Marines on the southwest side of the Han River cleared three-fourths of the town of Yondungpo.

Marines in Sight of City

Associated Press Correspondent Bill Ross said "You-Can-Have-It" hill—so named because its rocky, barren slope is unattractive—puts the Leathernecks within easy sight of downtown Seoul.

"But it will be some time before any Marines get to what they can see," Ross added, after visiting the crest and taking cover during Red mortar fire.

The 26-mile gain of the United States First Cavalry north of Taegu in the southeast beachhead was the biggest yet recorded since a United Nations offensive began there September 16.

Other American and Allied forces on the southeast front advanced up to 8 miles, rapidly expanding their holdings against spotty North Korean resistance.

It was around Seoul that the fighting flared highest. American and South Korean Marines driving on that Red-held capital from the northwest came under artillery fire from the public park atop South Mountain, around which Seoul is built.

Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead, with the Marines, reported an estimated 3000 Reds had honeycombed the 700-foot-high mountain with deep defense works.

Whitehead said the Seoul defense force was estimated at 10,000 men, parts of the North Korean 17th and 18th Divisions.

The Allied Marines, moving on the city from the northwest, had sent patrols almost to the city limits on the west side by mid-afternoon Friday, but had not then entered the city proper, Whitehead said.

A report that the column had entered Seoul Thursday proved premature. It came from aerial observers who apparently were confused as to the exact location of the city limits.

Another United States Marine column, stabbing toward Seoul from the southwest, used flamethrowers and bayonets to cut a half-mile swath through the industrial suburb of Yongdungpo. This column has yet to cross the Han River to get inside Seoul itself.

Associated Press Correspondent Tom Lambert said the Marines suffered relatively heavy casualties in close fighting through the battered, fire-ravaged factories of Yongdungpo.

Whitehead said civilians fleeing Seoul reported the Reds were hastily constructing stone barricades and digging trenches in the streets for an apparent rugged defense of the city.

"The sprawling city of more than one million population may become one of the bloodiest battlegrounds of the Korea war," Whitehead reported. "The Reds are preparing for house-to-house fighting. This could mean the destruction of a large part of the capital."

The Reds in the city are cut off on three sides from supplies and reinfrocements.

The capture of Suwon by the American Seventh Division and its integrated South Korean troops, blocks the chief entry for Communist forces from the south and cuts the main rail line over which the Reds once shipped supplies to their forces in the southeast.

The northern United States Marine column has severed the railroad from North Korea to Seoul and placed the nearby highway under commanding fire.

The entire 22-mile-wide Inchon-Seoul beachhead stands in the way of Red entry from the west. The only way the Reds can feed munitions and reinforcements to their Communist defense forces is from the East, over secondard roads winding through craggy peaks and rolling hills.

General MacArthur's grand strategy seemed to be working. He gambled that the forces which landed at Inchon September 15 would encircle and immobilize Seoul, key to the Red supply route from North Korea. The next step would be to crush the Red forces between Seoul and the southeastern allied lines in a huge nutcracker.

Southern Arm Being Forged

United States First Cavalry Division tanks and infantry made the greatest strides toward making the southern arm of that nutcracker a reality.

At nightfall Friday the cavalry's advance column was seven miles southeast of Sangju, 43 air miles northwest of Taegu and 100 air miles southeast of Seoul, Associated Press Correspondent Jack MacBeth reported.

This represented an advance of more than 20 miles in the light of one day.

Objective of the drive is to cut the Kumchon-Hamchang road at Sangju and close the best escape route for Reds fleeing the Allied offensive.

"She's a rout now," exclaimed the First Cavalry's Commander, Maj. Gen. Hobart R. Gay, who rode with the first column. "We've had a great day."

General Captures Two Reds

The general himself was narrowly missed by an enemy grenade and brought in a couple of Red prisoners. He declined to confirm it, but one of his troopers said Gay also killed at least one Red.

The First Cavalry task force rolled six miles in six hours at the outset of its push, but was still on the east banks of the Naktong River. It by-passed an estimated 5000 Reds trapped Thursday in a triangle between the main highway to Seoul and the Naktong River.

More than 400 of the trapped Reds surrendered to the First Cavalry. The main force was reported getting hungry, and more were expected to surrender soon.

Driving west, the U. S. Twenty-Fourth Division was within 4½ miles of Kumchon, which is 20 miles south of Sangju and 18 miles northwest of Waegwan, AP Correspondent Ben Price reported.

The Twenty-Fourth's aim was to cut the Red escape route to the north, just as the First Cavalry was striving to do farther north.

To the south British Twenty-Seventh Brigade troops relieved units of the advancing Twenty-Fourth Division and found themselves immediately in heavy battle on high ground 7 miles west of the Naktong River. It was the first real assignment of the offensive for the British troops on the southeastern perimeter, a small number of British Royal Marines was in action on the Seoul front.

On the British brigade's south flank, a United States Second Division spearhead captured Chogye, 6 miles west of the Naktong River on the road to Gyopchon. Another Second Division column drove into the outskirts of Sinban, 8 miles southeast of Chogye and until recently the headquarters for the Second, Fourth and Ninth North Korean divisions.

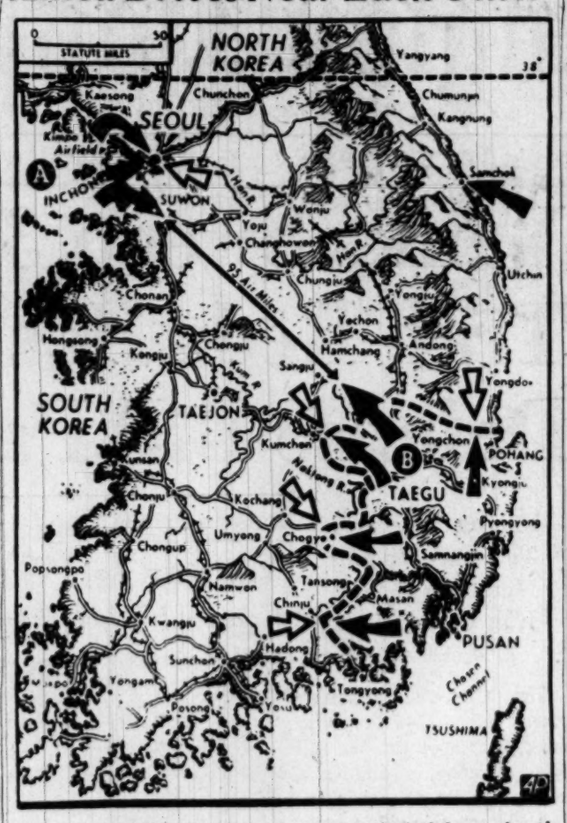
The United States Twenty-fifth Division, on the southern end of the Allied offense line, advanced to high ground 3 miles east of Chinju against stiff Red opposition and minefields. This put the Twenty-fifth's leading elements 10 miles west of where they were when the drive started.

The mountainous northern "roof" of the southeast front was left to South Korean Republican troops, who also were advancing.

Peron Given U. S. Books

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Sept. 22 (U.P.)—United States Ambassador Stanton Griffis today gave President Juan D. Peron a collection of 350 representative American books as a gift from President Truman and the American people.

Allied Drives Near Each Other



20-MILE BREAK-THROUGH—Toughening Red defense slowed the United States drive on Seoul (A) yesterday but American infantry stabbed into Suwon and captured its airstrip 20 miles south of the Korean capital. In the southeast, the United States First Cavalry Division sped more than 20 miles north in a major breakthrough (B) to a point 7 miles southeast of Sangju and some 95 air miles from their comrades in the Suwon area

Two U. S. Divisions in Race To Link Up With Seoul Force

WITH THE 1ST ARMY CORPS IN KOREA, Sept. 22 (U.P.)—The United Nations breakthrough at Waegwan turned into a race today between units of the United States 24th and 1st Cavalry Divisions.

Latest official reports placed an armored unit of the 24th Division less than six miles from Kumchon. Reliable military sources told the United Press that tank spearheads had entered the city, 18 miles northwest of Waegwan.

Another task force, from the 1st Cavalry, also raced forward. It plunged 20 miles to the Naktong River at a point about two miles east of Songsan.

The big competition was between the 24th and 1st, both trying to outdistance each other and win the race to link up with Allied forces 100 miles north on the Inchon-Seoul front.

South Korean forces drove westward to the Naktong at a point 16 miles north of Waegwan, completely sealing off what remained of the enemy Third Division at Tabu, 12 miles northwest of Taegu.

The Republicans said Waegwan had been cleared of enemy troops, and the First Cavalry Division estimated it had taken about 400 prisoners during the day. There was no report of prisoners from the Twenty-fourth Division.

There were two dark spots in the picture on this front. On the lower flank of the United Nations breakthrough, British troops driving toward Songju, 18 miles west of Taegu, were held up by heavy enemy resistance about 10,000 yards west of the Naktong.

Units of the ROK First Division, 20 miles northeast of Waegwan, and the second ROK Corps, said they were running into heavy resistance and had gained less than 1000 yards during the day.

Area Hospitals Are 'Hard Hit' By Cutback in Federal Aid

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Three Washington and one area hospital will be hard hit by the imminent cutback in Federal aid to hospital construction, it was learned yesterday.

The Federal action was described as "a terrible blow" to hospital expansion plans of Arlington County, Va., Hospital, by John J. Anderson, the hospital administrator.

In the District, officials of Children's, Casualty and George Washington University Hospitals all complained that their building programs will be seriously hurt by the cutbacks.

"It may mean another public drive for funds for Children's Hospital," said James H. Lemon, president of the institution's board of trustees.

50 Percent Cut

The Budget Bureau has directed the Federal Security Agency to reduce its total allotment for hospital construction the current fiscal year from 150 million to 75 million dollars. This would reduce the District's share from its expected $487,888 to $243,944.

District projects affected include:

Children's Hospital, where a total of $598,000 in Federal funds has been granted for the $2,500,000 building project. The hospital was later allotted an additional $121,000 in Federal funds subject to the 150 million dollar national aid, or $75,000 in event the national fund was halved.

Casualty Hospital, where plans call for construction of a $750,000, 75-bed unit to replace a portion of the present hospital. It was allotted $200,000 if the full fund was available, or $127,000 in event of the cutback.

$900,000 Building

GWU Hospital, with plans for a special building for cancer patients, was earmarked for a Federal grant of $150,000, or $75,000 if the Federal fund was cut. The new GWU building was scheduled to cost $900,000, but no contract has been let, its officials said.

Anderson said news of the Budget Office directive is particularly "deadly" to Arlington County Hospital plans. His hospital applied in July for $207,000 towards a $375,000 expansion program which would double the hospital's present 115-bed capacity.

U. S. Planes Kill 650 Reds In One Day

TOKYO, Sept. 22 (AP)—Six hundred and fifty Red troops were reported killed today by United States Fifth Air Force planes.

Results of the day's action up to 3 p. m. were announced by an Air Force spokesman. He said 216 close support sorties were flown by that hour.

Fighter-bombers strafed, rocketed and bombed Communist soldiers all along the front.

Returning pilots said they saw 2000 Communist troops moving north from Chechon, 72 miles southeast of Seoul.

Thirty enemy tanks were spotted opposite the United States First Corps area northwest of Taegu. Fighters were directed to go after them.

Associated Press Correspondent Bem Price with the United States Twenty-fourth Division, reported Mustang Fighters supporting the Twenty-fourth Division's advance knocked out 15 enemy tanks along the Kumchon road.

The Navy, giving additional detail of carrier air strikes first reported Thursday, listed fliers operating from the cerriers Philippine Sea and Valley Forge.

Valley Forge fliers hit two bridges outside Suwon, which the United States Seventh Division since has entered, and made assorted strikes ranging up the Kaesong near the Thirty-eighth Parallel.

Defense Dept. Scans Status Of Reservists

Mounting reports that military reservists are having trouble getting and holding jobs have resulted in creation of a high-level committee to inform employers and employes of what they may expect in future calls to active duty.

The committee, headed by Brig. Gen. Melvin J. Maas, former Republican Representative from Minnesota, is looking into the need of more definite criteria for selection of reservists, and the time reservists must serve, assuming there will be no full-scale war to require all-out mobilization.

'Reverse Point System'

Gen. Maas' Pentagon committee is studying a plan for a "reverse point system," whereby reservists will be rated in a manner similar to the discharge setup after World War II.

"For example," Maas said last night, "each reservist might be given so many points for active duty in the past, double points for wartime service, triple points for overseas duty. Dependents would also be worth a certain number of points. Age would also be a factor."

Then, continued Maas, "the services would announce that a reservist with, let's say 40 points, would not be subject to recall in the near future. Under this system, each reservist could figure out his status for himself."

Year's Duty Studied

Maas said his committee also is studying the possibility of restricting reservists' active service to one year, instead of the 21 months now required, since many employers are reluctant to let their employes go for 21 months.

The United States Chamber of Commerce has agreed to cooperate with the committee, and is polling a selected group of employers to determine the minimum service data they need in hiring and retaining workers.

The committee will make its recommendations on October 11, directly to the Defense Department's Civilian Components Policy Board. This group will recommend policy changes to Defense Secretary Marshall.

Others On Committee

Beside Maas, committee members are Col. Louis C. Friedersdorff, chief of the Army's Civilian Components Division; Frank T. McCoy, jr., special consultant to the Assistant Secretary of the Air Force, and Clayton L. Burwell, special assistant to the Secretary of the Navy.

The D. C. Apprenticeship Council yesterday passed and sent to local Selective Service officials a resolution urging deferment consideration for registered apprantices who have served at least six months in one of the 36 trades considered "critical" in World War II.

Local recruiting offices were relatively inactive yesterday, with the Army reporting 14 and the Air Force 11 enlistments, the Navy five, the Marines none.

5 Area GIs Reported Wounded in Action; 2 Said to Have Been Hit for Second Time

Corpl. Pratt | Corpl. Yates | Corpl. Owens | Lieut. Lippincott | Pfc. Kropp

Corporals Yates and Owens have suffered their second wounds in the Korean war

Five Washington area men have been wounded in Korea—two of them for the second time.

Defense Department casualty list No. 103 listed:

Corp. William Kenneth Owens, 25, son of Joseph Edward Owens, sr., 313 Commerce st., Alexandria. Wounded for the second time.

Corpl. Howard Joseph Yates, 21, son of Mrs. Ella A. Yates, 122 16th st. se. Wounded for the second time, according to an unofficial report.

Lieut. John C. Lippincott, 24, son of Mrs. Norman R. Lippincott, 3224 E st. se.

Corpl. Benjamin Q. Pratt, 26, son of Benjamin F. Pratt, 1513 Columbia st. nw.

Pfc. Otto A. Kropp, jr., 21, son of Otto A. Kropp, 739 13th st. se.

Corporal Owens, first wounded in July, was injured the second time on September 7, according to a notification telegram sent his father. A few days later his father received a telegram from the Defense Department telling him his son had been returned to duty the next day, September 8.

Owens received a letter Wednesday from his son stating that he is back with his outfit. He said he was wounded after being lost for four days with four other soldiers "up in the mountains."

Owens served in Europe during World War II and was on occupation duty in Germany.

Seriously Wounded

Corporal Yates was seriously wounded on September 8, the Defense Department informed his mother. However, a friend, James Walter Green, who lives next door, said he received a letter from Yates on August 28 in which the corporal indicated he was wounded once before.

Mrs. Yates has received no word from the Defense Department about this incident.

Yates was born in Washington and went to Brown Junior High School and Phelps Vocational School here. He enlisted in the Army about three years ago. Yates is the youngest of eight brothers — six of whom saw service in the last war. He has three sisters.

Shot Through Thigh

Lieutenant Lippincott was seriously wounded on August 12, his mother has been informed. He was shot through the thigh.

Lippincott, a native of Pittsburgh, Pa., was raised in Jacksonville, Fla., where he graduated from high school. He entered the Army when he was 18 and was stationed in the Air Corp.

He was discharged at the end of World War II and went to the University of Florida, from which he graduated in 1949. He took a commission in the Army and, after graduating from the paratrooper school at Fort Benning, Ga., he went overseas.

He married the former Margaret Simpkins shortly before leaving for Japan. His wife followed him overseas and is now in Tokyo. Mrs. Lippincott said she heard from her daughter-in-law about a week ago that her son was in a hospital in Korea.

Pfc. Kropp was slightly wounded on September 9 while fighting with the 35th Infantry Regiment.

He enlisted in the Army in August, 1948. A native of Washington, he attended Hine Junior High School here. His father is a veteran of World War I and has worked at the Navy Yard for 21 years.

Corporal Pratt, who served in Europe during World War II, was wounded on September 6. His family received a letter from him Monday which said he had been hit by shrapnel in the neck, left shoulder, right side and back, and was in a hospital at Yokohama, Japan.

He had been fighting with the 24th Infantry Regiment.

Pratt entered the Army August 21, 1943. He was born in Washington and went to Armstrong High School. He has two brothers. One, Russell, 25, served overseas in the Marine Corps during the last war.

Australia Ends Home-Duty-Only Army Enlistment

CANBERRA, Sept. 22 (U.P.)—Australian servicemen henceforth will be enlisted for duty anywhere in the world, Prime Minister Menzies announced today.

Menzies disclosed also that Australia's permanent defense force will be doubled and that a compulsory military training program for 18-year-olds will start in May, 1951. He said new defense plans include pay increases for the armed services.

Menzies said the action making servicemen subject to duty anywhere in the world was taken because it was difficult for him to explain the present setup under which Australian land forces cannot be sent overseas without special enlistment.

Truman Gets Plea to Save Officer's Life

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

LIEUT. LEON A. GILBERT

YORK, Pa., Sept. 22 (U.P.)—The wife of an army officer has appealed to President Truman to save the life of her husband, reported to have been sentenced to death by a courtmartial for failure to obey an order in the Korean fighting.

Through Representative James G. Lind (D.), of York, the plea of Mrs. Leon A. Gilbert for her 32-year-old husband was taken to the White House and the Pentagon. Details of the charge were not disclosed, but in a letter to his wife, Gilbert, a first lieutenant, said the order "would have led me and 12 other men to certain death." He is with the Twenty-fourth Infantry Regiment of the Twenty-fifth Division.

Mrs. Gilbert, mother of two children and expecting a third, said she received the letter early this week, dated Sept. 6, which began:

"Today I was sentenced to death by courtmartial."

Referring to the order, Gilbert's letter said: "I believe with all my heart that you will understand the strain both mentally and physically that I was under at the time. If it would not have been for you and the children, I would have gone willingly, but a man seems to place his family above all in these matters."

Mrs. Gilbert hired a lawyer who took up the case with Lind. The Pennsylvania representative discussed the case with Brig. Gen. Charles Maylan, White House liaison officer with Congress. Lind also asked the Army Judge Advocate General, Maj. Gen. E. M. Brown, to get Gilbert's records from Korea.

"Mrs. Gilbert is my constituent," said Lind, "and I want to give the man every benefit of the doubt."

Lind, who served on courtmartials during the last war, said he does not know what the charge against Gilbert is, "but it wouldn't be refusal to obey an order."

"I think it could be misbehavior before an enemy," he said.

A courtmartial death sentence must be reviewed by the judge advocate general and eventually by the President before it can be carried out.

Gilbert, a native of York, entered the Army in 1940. He served with the Ninty-Second Division in Italy and was discharged in 1946 and became a reservist. During a brief civilian period, he worked as a waiter at the Yorktowne Hotel here, but returned to active duty in 1947 and was promoted to first lieutenant at Fort Dix, N. J.

ON THE NORTHERN FRONT IN KOREA, Sept. 22 (U.P.)—The South Korean army went on a rampage today, scoring its biggest gains of the war.

The Republican troops, who had been shoved south all the way to Pohang from the thirty-eighth parallel, opened their big push today with a drive that went with such lightning speed that they lost contact with their artillery and command posts. Once they had to back up to be within range of their rear support.

They recaptured Uisong, 45 miles northwest of Pohang; Hunghae, five miles north of Pohang, and Kigye, 10 miles northwest of Pohang. Their advances ranged from 10 miles in the Uisong area and eight in the Pohang sector to 3 or 4 miles gained at other points along the 50-mile northern front.

The South Koreans, determined to drive to the thirty-eighth parallel, jumped off this morning a short distance north of Uihung. By nightfall, the Eighth Division had occupied Uisong, only 16 miles south of Andong, which is one of the Reds' key bastions.

Andong lies on the main supply route from Seoul to the northern rim of the Pusan beachhead, and the division sent strong patrols out tonight to try to determine enemy strength there.

To the west of the Eighth Division, the South Korean Sixth Division advanced 3 miles against moderate opposition, reaching the vicinity of Kunwi, 10 miles northwest of Uihung.

On battalion pushed to within 2 mles of Chonga, an enemy supply point on the coastal highway skirting the shoreline south of Yongdok.

The battalion had advanced so rapidly, hoowever, and had left the rest of the regiment so far behind that shortly before nightfall it withdrew 2 miles to consolidate its line between Hunghae and Chonga.

The Rok advance was so fast in this area that three Red tanks were bypassed and were discovered tonight 500 yards behind the South Korean front lines. One tank drove into a railroad tunnel and the other two were seen nearby.

The South Koreans attacked all three with 3.5-inch bazookas. If that does not take care of the tanks, Navy ships offshore will shell them.

American fighter planes and several flights of B-26 bombers supported the South Korean drive.

Soviet Charge Against U. S. On U. N. List

NEW YORK, Sept. 22 (AP).—Russia's charges of American aggression against China will get a hearing in the United Nations General Assembly. The 14-nation Steering Committee today voted to put the accusations on the Assembly agenda.

Only Nationalist China voted "no," contending that neither Russia nor the Communist Peiping government has the right to decide whether aggression has taken place in China.

United States representative Warren R. Austin voted in favor. "We believe in fairness," Austin said. "Every complaint should have its hearing."

U. S. Proposal Sidetracked

An American proposal to have the Assembly take over the explosive Formosan situation was sidetracked by the Chinese Nationalist delegate, Dr. T. F. Tsiang, who demanded the committee wait until he receives instructions from his govermnent.

These probably will arrive next week. Chinese sources say Tsiang probably will be told to oppose putting the question on the agenda. He is expected to be joined by Russia.

Chiang Kai-shek's government opposes U. N. discussion of Formosa since that island is its last stronghold and it does not want title obscured by debate in the world organization.

Russia is against inclusion because she does not want international opposition to balk possible occupation of Formosa by the Soviet-backed Peiping regime.

The 12 other members of the Steering Committee, who decide what problems the Assembly shall discuss, are expected to override the Chinese and Russian objections.

Truman Action Assailed

The Russian complaint, set for in a memorandum distributed today, charges that President Truman's action in sending the United States Seventh Fleet to neutralize Formosa during the Korean war constitutes aggression. It charges American planes have bombed Chinese territory in Manchuria.

Austin admitted in the Security Council early this month that an American fighter plane might have strafed Manchuria by mistake while on a mission over North Korea.

The Council had voted down the Russian charge after Soviet delegate Jacob A. Malik had vetoed an American plan for a U. N. investigation of the incident.

The Assembly itself did not meet today because of a moslem holiday. It meets Saturday morning.

Seagrave Again Asks Bail

RANGOON, Sept. 22 (AP).—The Burmese lawyer for Dr. Gordon S. Seagrave, noted "Burma Surgeon" jailed on charges of high treason for aiding rebel tribesmen, filed a new application for his release on bail today on the grounds he is "presently seriously ill."

Fellers to Sue R. S. Allen Over 'Misquotation'

Bonner F. Fellers, Republican National Committee official, yesterday formally denied as a "vicious misquotation" a syndicated column by Robert S. Allen quoting him as telling a group of anti-Nazi Germans here that "Hitler did Germany a world of good."

Fellers said he is instructing his attorneys to bring immediate suit for damages.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York had telegraphed GOP Chairman Guy Gabrielson Wednesday demanding that Fellers be fired immediately if he made the remark attributed to him.

Gabrielson telegraphed Dewey yesterday that in view of Feller's denial, any further action by the chairman would "be unnecessary and unwarranted."

Fellers, a retired brigadier general, has been chief of the committee's veterans division and an assistant to the chairman since 1947. He is 54 and was psychological warfare officer on Gen. Douglas MacArthur's staff from 1944 to 1946.

The committee made public Gabrielson's telegram and Fellers' statement after the chairman held a lengthy conference with his assistant on his return from Columbus, Ohio, where he had addressed the Republican State Convention.

Informed of Fellers' statement, Allen denied he misquoted him.

Allen said the six Germans and their American guide, Gerhart Seger, told him of Fellers remarks. He added he went to Fellers and Fellers confirmed the remarks.

"If he says I misquoted him he's misquoting himself," Allen told a reporter.

Bunche Wins Nobel Award

lived here until after the war's end when he became a U. N. servant.

He and his wife, the former Ruth Harris, have three children. Her mother, Mrs. E. R. Harris, lives at 1947 Vermont ave. nw.

Previous American winners were Theodore Roosevelt in 1906; Elihu Root, 1912; Woodrow Wilson, 1919; Charles G. Dawes, 1925; Frank B. Kellogg, 1929; Nicholas Murray Butler and Jane Addams jointly, 1931; Cordell Hull, 1945; John R. Mott and Emily G. Balch jointly in 1946.

Bunche first went to Palestine in June 1947, with the U. N. Special Commission on Palestine, the commission that recommended partition of the country. The commission came to an end when the British dropped their mandate over Palestine in May 1948 and the new state of Israel was proclaimed.

Bunche went back as assistant to Count Folke Bernadotte, the mediator the U. N. sent in an effort to stop the Palestinean war. When the Swedish count was assassinated, Bunche became acting mediator. It was a matter of luck, a last minute delay, that prevented Bunche from being in Bernadotte's car and meeting a like fate at the hands of the terrorists.

Through months of difficult and complicated negotiations, Bunche worked with patient tact and firmness, secured first a truce and then an armistice between Israel and Egypt, and brought the shooting war to an end.

Dr. Bunche, whose grandmother was born in slavery, whose father was a barber and whose mother a musician, was born in Detroit, August 7, 1904.

The family went West. Bunche, orphaned when 12 years old, attended the University of California on an athletic scholarship. He won letters in football and basketball, and starred on a three-times champion basketball team. Between classes he worked as a janitor and in the summer was a messboy on Pacific Coast steamships.

Won Phi Beta Kappa

He was graduated with Phi Beta Kappa honors in 1927, a scholar who blended an interest in anthropology with political science.

Going to Harvard, Bunche received his master's degree there in 1928 and his doctorate in 1934. He did post-doctoral work in anthropology and political science at Northwestern University, the London School of Economics and the University of Capetown, Union of South Africa.

In 1928 he joined the Howard University faculty. The next year he became head of its political science department.

Fellowships from the Rosenwald Foundation and Social Science Research Council took him on field trips to Africa, Indonesia and Malaya for first-hand studies of colonial problems in 1931-32 and 1936-38.

In the early part of World War II he took a leave of absence from Howard University to join the Office of Strategic Services, where, due to his specialized knowledge, he rose to be chief of the African section.

DR. RALPH J. BUNCHE
. . . former Howard U. professor

In 1944 he joined the State Department as a social science analyst on African and other colonial areas and not long after was associate chief of the Dependent Areas Division. He was the first Negro desk officer in the department's history, it is said.

Bunche participated in the conferences preceding the organization of the U. N., and in April 1946 was loaned by the State Department to the U. N. secretariat. In March 1947 he resigned from the department to remain with the U. N.

Bunche, who has had many honors, was invited by President Truman to become Assistant Secretary of State for Near Eastern and African Affairs, but declined the post.

His interest in the work of the U. N. was a major cause in his decision to turn down the President's 1949 offer. Financial considerations were another factor. Racial segregation in Washington was still another.

In a statement given to The Washington Post by telephone last night, Bunche said he received "with deep humility" the cable notifying him of the Nobel award.

He paid immediate tribute to Count Bernadotte as "a great and courageous man who gave his life in a determined effort to bring peace to Palestine."

"At this moment I cannot forget that Count Barnadotte and 10 other members of our team gave their lives in the effort to restore peace."

1400 Doctors, Dentists Hear A-Bomb Data

Some 1400 Washington physicians, nurses and dentists yesterday heard talks on atomic physics, atom bomb blast effects, and civil defense planning.

Medical aspects of the over-all problem will come later in the three-session course sponsored by the District Medical Society. The course was begun yesterday in duplicate, four-hour, morning and evening sessions.

On Washington defense planning, the opening classes were told:

1. The Police Department plans to set up a Registry of the Dead, contrary to national advice that such identification work be handled by Public Health Service.

2. The Fire Department will concentrate on isolating rather than extinguishing the multiple fires that will break out throughout the city. Such efforts would be directed at keeping fire lanes open for "hundreds of needed rescue squads" to go in and evacuate the wounded.

3. Plans for civilian defense should not ignore the possibility of underground and underwater atom bomb bursts, even though the air burst is "most likely."

Panic Technique

The third point was emphasized by Herbert Scoville, jr., technical director of the armed forces special weapons project, who said earth or water bursts might be used by the enemy "if his idea was to create panic (rather than maximum killing and injuring)."

Panic, Scoville pointed out, would be greater due to radioactivity hazards. In an airburst A-bomb blast, he said, the radiation hazard is virtually gone after the first 90 seconds because the fission products rise and are dispersed in the upper atmospheres.

Police Inspector John Fondahl, District director of civilian defense, took issue with the recommendation of the National Security Resources Board that Public Health Service handle the work of identification of the dead.

Current thinking of the Police Department, he said; is that the department should and will prepare to handle such duty. He described a four-part tag identification system he said the department was considering.

Sergt. Joseph H. Matarre of the District Fire Department, told of fire plans for civilian defense. The city firemen, he said, would be too busy to do anything but fight fires if an A-bomb was used against Washington.

"The need for hundreds of well-trained rescue squads cannot be over-estimated," he said, pointing out that the firefighters would concentrate on keeping fire lanes open for them to go in and evacuate the wounded.

The second and third classes in the course will be held on the mornings and evenings of next Tuesday and Friday, at The Interior Department auditorium.

National Geographic Confiscated by Czechs

Czechoslovakia confiscated the May and Junne issues of the National Geographic Magazine after refusing to deliver mailed copies to Czech subscribers, Post Office officials disclosed yesterday. No reason for the action has been given.

The May issue included an article entitled "Japan Tries Freedom's Road" and the June magazine included an article headed "Roaming Korea South of the Iron Curtain."

Slack Sentenced to 15 Years For Espionage to Aid Soviet GREENEVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 22 (AP).—Alfred Dean Slack today was sentenced to 15 years in a Federal prison for wartime spying for Soviet Russia.

Judge Robert L. Taylor in pronouncing sentence termed Slack's espionage activities for Russia "shocking."

The judge thus ignored the Government's recommendation for a 10-year sentence for Slack, who pleaded guilty last Monday and begged for mercy.

United States Attorney James M. Meek had suggested a 10-year sentence, saying there were "extenuating circumstances in Slack's favor.

Slack's lawyer called the bespectacled 44-year-old defendant a "weakling" who was ensnared in the Soviet espionage network.

Slack was arrested at Syracuse, N. Y., June 15 and charged with passing to Russian agents information on the manufacture of the high explosive RDX, made at Holston Ordnance Works at nearby Kingsport, Tenn.

The Government said he stole a sample of RDX while working at Holston in 1943-44 and handed it, with technical information, to Harry Gold, Philadelphia biochemist who also is charged with espionage.

Pope Declares Dogmas Agree With Science

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 22 (AP). Pope Pius XII says there is no contradiction between the conclusions of science and the dogma of Roman Catholic faith.

His statement, released today, was in an address at Castel Gandolfo last night to students from French Catholic institutes.

"All sciences," the Pope said, "have directly or indirectly some relation with religion—not only theology, philosophy, history, literature, but also the other sciences: law, medicine, physics, natural sciences, cosmology, paleontology, philology."

The pontiff recommended study of his recent encyclical, "Humani Generis" (of mankind), in which he warned Catholics the church's dogma must be accepted and respected.

Vatican sources disclosed last month the pontiff intends to proclaim as dogma the Catholic belief that the Virgin Mary went to heaven bodily.

(In London today, the Protestant Truth Society declared the new dogma will encourage devotions to Mary and "detract from the glory and worship of Jesus Christ the Lord." It would be a "grave departure" from the Bible, the society said.

(The society—an interdenominational body of about 10,000 clergymen and laymen—said the dogma "will seek to give credence to that which lacks historical proof.")

Allies Split 6 German Steel Trusts

FRANKFURT, Germany, Sept. 22 (AP).—The United States, Britain and France ordered today the breakup of Germany's six big steel trusts into small, independent companies.

This is the "Big Six" of the Ruhr—continental Europe's largest steel producing area which supplied Hitler's Third Reich with 90 percent of its steel.

The breakup of the corporate structure of the big six companies is to "eliminate excessive concentrations of economic power in Germany," an Allied statement said. Seven additional companies will be broken up.

Allied officials said the move would not interrupt the production of plants which are pouring out steel for western rearmament and for Germany's booming export industries.

The Allies reported that reorganization plans for the steel industry are taking shape and "it was always the intention that the work of reorganization should march hand in hand with the deconcentration of the old concerns."

The decree placed the six steel trusts in "liquidation" at the close of business September 30.

In 1939 the furnaces of this big six produced an estimated 20 million tons of steel for the Nazi war machine.

Allied bombing attacks and postwar dismantling destroyed six-million tons of the big six capacity. But the breakup of the financial structure of these concerns has been a major target of Allied occupation policy since 1945.

Anti-Hoarding Drive Opened By Hungary

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Sept. 22 (AP).—The government has launched an intense campaign against hoarders and is meting out punishment to any persons guilty of "purchasing fever," the official Communist newspaper Szabad Nep announced today.

(Reports filtering into Vienna from Hungary have indicated a widespread urge inside the Communist-governed country because of current economic troubles. The Vienna Socialist newspaper Arbeiter Zeitung, reporting on this recently, said the Communists were seizing scapegoats because of failure of Hungarian industrial and agricultural production.)

Szabad Nep admitted some "appalling" shortages in certain foodstuffs. It said not only "class enemies" were responsible, but also failures in the distribution system.

Szabad Nep's editorial, which must be looked upon as the official word of the government, promised "proper measures" to insure that persons whose work prevents them from lining up at shops will not be at a disadvantage. It did not say whether this meant a return of rationing, abolished in Hungary last year.

The paper published a long list of names of persons accused of being hoarders and blackmarketeers. Those who "attacked the shops, spread war-mongering rumors and organized queues" before the stores, it said, were doing this "to destroy the goods supplies of the toilers, on orders of the imperialists."

Couple Assaulted By Plant Prowler

An Alexandria vending machine company proprietor and his wife reported yesterday they were assaulted by an intruder whom they surprised Thursday night in their place of business.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McDonald of the McDonald Cigarette Vending Co. told police they noticed about 9 p. m. that someone had tampered with one of the machines at the plant, 2316 River rd., Alexandria. As they searched, a man jumped from behind a machine and threw both to the floor. The assailant fled, they said.

Red Bill Fight Delays Senate

lating Senate Rule 19, forbidding uncomplimentary references to Senators. Later, on motion of Senator Paul Douglas (D. Ill.), Kefauver was allowed to proceed.

Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.), who originally voted for the McCarran bill, followed Kefauver with a warm defense of the veto message. He said he had been engaged in "soul-searching" ever since he voted for the bill and called on the Senate to heed the President's advice.

Senator Herbert H. Lehman (D., N. Y.), a consistent opponent of the bill, then took the floor for an hour. Lehman praised the President for "standing firm in the face of political pressures", and compared him with "the great defenders of liberty in this country."

Rumors that the liberal Democrats, aided by Senator William Langer (R. N. Dak.), planned to "filibuster" the session to a close, in an effort to uphold the veto, spread through the lobbies, but most of the Red bill opponents denied this. Langer alone indicated he might filibuster the vote, "if he could get any help."

In an effort to forestall such a move, Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) took the floor to warn the Senate that there was "going to be a vote" even if adjournment plans had to be called off.

Could Reconsider Recess

Lucas pointed out that only by holding the Senate through midnight tonight, without action on the veto, would the over-riding vote be forestalled. Before that occurred he suggested the adjournment resolution would be yanked back and reconsidered.

Before adjourning overnight the House meanwhile cleaned up loose ends of the session's legislative business in preparation for a short and sweet leavetaking today.

The House adjournment strategy was well oiled by Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) and all of the preliminaries went through without a hitch.

A group of 65 House Republicans, led by Representative John W. Heselton (R., Mass.) made elaborate prepaartions to amend the adjournment resolution.

Instead of adjourning until November 27, without plans to meet meanwhile unless called back by the President, they urged that congressional leaders be empowered to reassemble Congress in an emergency.

Amendment Not Presented

But they never got a chance to offer the amendment. Democratic Whip Percy Priest (Tenn.) sent the adjournment resolution and the House promptly voted to cut off all debate and amendments. The resolution breezed through by a voice count.

Senate leaders received the House Saturday adjournment move with frank dismay. They had hoped to wind up all business, including the veto, and quit town last night. When they learned that the House had taken overnight leave, they decided to go ahead with their own adjournment plans by the simple device of remaining in session until 12:01 a. m., legally meeting the Saturday deadline.

Then the Democratic liberals opened their talkathon against the McCarran-Wood bill, and all fingers were crossed. If it continues through the night there may be a lot of week-end unpacking and the ticket windows will do a rush business in cancellations.

U. S. Ship Line Held Aiding China Reds

Senator Magnuson (D., Wash.) yesterday charged an unnamed American steamship line with smuggling oil and munitions into Communist China.

Magnuson said he would subpena officials of the line to appear before the maritime subcommittee of the Senate Commerce Committee. He is chairman of the subcommittee.

His charge, he said, was based on a letter from a seaman aboard one of the ships to an officer of the Seventh U. S. Fleet now maintaining a blockade between Formosa and the Chinese mainland. He declined to name the writer of the letter or the officer to whom it was addressed.

"I am on a ship I am ashamed to be aboard," Magnuson read from the letter on the Senate floor. "We are blockade running from Kobe (Japan) to Communist China, hauling thousands of 55-gallon drums of oil and gasoline, armor plate, tools and parts to the damn Reds."

The writer urged the Navy officer, if the ship were sighted, to "blow her sky-high, even if she does fly the American flag."

Under pressure from Senate Republicans, Magnuson said the Administration and the Army command in Japan were not responsible for inability to stop smuggling in an area long notorious for smuggling and piracy. The shipowners alone were to blame, he said, for aiding those who have declared themselves the enemies of this country.

He added that, if necessary, he would subpeona the writer of the letter, his shipmates and officers of the Army and Navy to testify before his subcommittee.

Two Are Held For Jury in Killings Here

A coroner's jury yesterday held two men for action of the grand jury in connection with two murders.

Held were William Hightower, 32, of 1816 Swann st. nw., and Melvin Robinson, 28, of 1009 Lamont st. nw.

Hightower is accused of fatally stabbing John C. Staples, 33, of 1412 T st. nw., in the basement of a vacant house at 1325 S st. nw. Police said they believe Hightower lured Staples to the basement to rob him.

Staples' body was discovered September 11. He was identified through fingerprints. According to police, he had once been arrested on a narcotics charge.

Police said they obtained information pointing to Hightower as the slayer. Their search for Hightower led to District Jail. By a strange coincidence, he had been arrested on a narcotics charge on the same day Staples' body was found.

Robinson was held in the fatal beating early Thursday of Frank J. McDermott, 62, of 511 7th st., Seat Pleasant, Md.

McDermott was struck over the head with a piece of wood after he left a "gill" joint in Wiley ct. nw. Police said witnesses identified Robinson as the man who struck McDermott and then rifled the pockets of the unconscious man.

Robinson was arrested two hours later and charged with assault with a dangerous weapon. The charge was changed to murder when McDermott died of a fractured skull.

Ex-Janitor Sues For False Arrest

A $15,000 suit charging false arrest has been filed in Montgomery Circuit Court against Mr. and Mrs. David W. Sizemore of 206 Spring ave., Takoma Park.

The plaintiff, Marvin A. Bogar of 208 Spring ave., next door, says in his suit that the Sizemores swore out a warrant against him May 18 charging him with assaulting their 9-year-old daughter. Bogar said he subsequently was acquitted of the charge in Silver Spring Police Court, but was dismissed from his job as a janitor at the J. Enos Ray Elementary School in Takoma Park and suffered injury to his reputation as a result.

Hostages Free, Tension Eased In Berlin Area

BERLIN, Sept. 22 (U.P.).—East and West Berlin authorities called a truce tonight in the five-day flareup of their cold war and released all but one of the police hostages they have been holding.

There still was no sign of peace, however, on the Russo-British front. Armed troops of both sides prepared to dig in for the third night of watching one another from behind machine guns at a disputed border intersection.

(Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor said in an interview reported by the Associated Press that the revival of harassing tactics by the Communists and Russians in Berlin this week was a deliberate plot.

(It had two aims, the American commandant asserted: shake the confidence of the West German, and steam up the East Germans with a false air of emergency to get out the vote for the Russian zone October 15 elections.

(None of the incidents were important except that they fit a "deliberate pattern," General Taylor observed.)

Last night and during the early hours today, Western officials released 51 East German police they had seized during the past three days. Later this morning, a U. S. High Commission Court found six Soviet sector police guilty of carrying arms illegally into Western Berlin. But the court freed the six policemen because of "great and compelling circumstances."

The East German Communists then freed 25 West Berlin police held since Tuesday.

troop units in the combined army, under strict safeguards.

But the hardest part of the Ministers' job today was to persuade Moch. They had to convince him there was no thought of setting up a German national army; that Germany would not get priority over the Allies in rearmament; and that a Soviet invasion could not possibly be checked and held without putting Germans back in uniform.

This was a tall order, for Moch has bitter memories any father can understand. He is a passionate anti-Communist, but he is equally passionate in his hatred and fear of Germany.

Moch, moreover, is a powerful leader of the Socialist Party on whose support Premier Pleven and Foreign Minister Schuman depend. Schuman had no time before he left Paris September 10 to discuss the American proposals with Moch or to get Socialist support in advance.

The result was that although Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain agreed in principle to the entire American program—and had the full support of his Cabinet, the French Cabinet refused to budge on the German issue. Moch plans to fly back to Paris Monday or Tuesday, and the hope here is that he and his fellow Socialists will be convinced by the arguments he heard.

Today's meeting was notable also because it marked General Marshall's reentry into the center of world affairs, where he had stood for so long as Chief of Staff and Secretary of State.

Marshall did not need to be briefed on the swiftest possible creation of a combined army of the West. Before his appointment to the Pentagon, he had approved the main outlines of the program President Truman finally approved September 9 and which Secretary Acheson laid before the Foreign Ministers three days later.

Also, Marshall knew Bevin and Schuman as old friends of many international meetings, and they long ago developed deep respect and admiration for the old General.

Some of the questions that bothered the Foreign Ministers last week could be answered authoritatively only by the Defense Ministers and their military advisers. This was one reason why Moch and his British opposite number, Emmanuel Shinwell, got hurry calls early this week to fly to New York for today's meeting.

Secretary Acheson, as chairman of the 12-nation North Atlantic Council, is anxious to have as many doubts as possible cleared away before the 12, and later the Big Three, resume their meetings here next week. He still believes there is a good chance of getting an agreement, in principle, at least, on the Western army and use of German troops in it.

Lange Back in New York

Meanwhile, there were two hopeful signs that pointed to such an agreement. One was the return to New York of Foreign Minister Halvard Lange of Norway after a flying visit home. Lange had gone to consult his Cabinet and Parliament before agreeing to any plan that would put Norwegian forces under an international command. He was reported to have brought back full consent and approval, as, indeed, he predicted he would.

The other straw in the wind was the news the three Allied High Commissioners had slipped back to Germany, ready to discuss the German troop question with Chancellor Adenauer and other West German leaders. There was a guarded hint of such coming discussions in hte communique that ended the Foreign Ministers' meeting earlier this week.

If the French High Commissioner, Andre Francois-Poncet, joins in the talks wih Adenauer, it will mean the French Cabinet is willing at least to discuss the use of German troop units, even though it has refused up to now to make even a tentative commitment

Senate Group Cites Russell for Contempt

By the United Press

The Senate crime investigating committee slapped a contempt citation on Chicago racketeer Harry Russell yesterday after he doggedly refused t talk about his alleged ties with the old Capone mob and the S & G gambling syndicate in Miami.

Chairman Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) also announced the committee had subpenaed a number of New Jersey underworld characters suspected of running an interstate gambling ring with headquarters at Cliffside, N. J. He indicated the list includes Joe Adonis and Jerry Catena, and said they "apparently" have been dodging subpena servers.

Committe members approved contempt citation by unanimous vote. Russell already is under indictment in Miami on charges of gambling and bookmaking. But Kefauver said he will try to postpone action on the Miami indictment so Russell can be held here to face prosecution.

Russell faces a maximum penalty of one year in jail and $1000 fine if the full Senate and the Federal courts uphold the contempt citation.

Kefauver warned him repeatedly at an open hearing that he would be cited if he tpersisted in refusing to answer questions, which included his alleged dealings with jailed New York bookmaker Frank Erickson and gambling rings in St. Louis and Kansas City.

You Fear "Being Rubbed Out?"

Russell's stock reply was: "I decline to answer because the answer might tend to incriminate me."

Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) inquired bluntly if Russell were "afraid of being rubbed out" if he talked.

He replied quickly that no one had threatened his life.

"Be a man and face the music," roared Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.), "the boys in Korea are facing it and you're here acting like a privileged character."

Russell refused to say, among other things, whether:

He used the threat of gang violence to muscle in on the lucrative operations of the S & G syndicate in Miami.

He was ever a partner of Tony Arcardo, Charles "Cherry Nose" Gioe, or other former members of the old Capone gang.

He handled two million dollars in lay-off bets for Erickson, who was recently sentenced to prison in New York for bookmaking activities.

He handled lay-off bets in St. Louis and Kansas City.

He was involved in looting $900,000 from the Retail Clerks Protective Association office in Chicago.

Russell also professed a poor memory when the committee asked him what hotels he has been living in recently, and whether his wife recently bought a home at Miami eBach.

"What has my wife got to do with this messy situation?" he complained.

Wiley renewed his suggestion that Russell was "afraid you might be committting suicide if you answer."

He asked if Russell had heard "reports" that Charles Gargotta and Charles Binaggio were killed in Kansas City because they talked too much, or that ames W. Ragen, former head of the Continental (race) Wire Service at Chicago, had a fatal case of the same malady.

Russell said he didn't know.

AFL Demands Price Controls Be Placed on Key Commodities

HOUSTON, Sept. 22 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor demanded today that price controls be imposed on key commodities as soon as possible.

But the AFL declared a wage freeze, if necessary, should be delayed until wages have reached a "pre-invasion parity with prices."

Delegates to the annual convention also:

"Emphatically rejected any rigid formula which would tie changes in wages with changes in cost of living."

Declared that present Federal income tax schedule "places an undue burden on families of low income."

Called for an excess profits tax.

Declared new Federal credit restrictions on home-buying are felt most severely by low-income families.

The delegates also told their leaders there has been "undue delay" in merging the AFL and CIO and asked that the efforts be pressed.

"Undue Delay"

By overwhelming voice vote, delegates adopted resolutions committee report saying:

"We entertain some apprehension regarding the undue delay experienced in carrying forward these negotiations. It is our sincere hope the delay thus far encountered will in no way retard, defer or derail the ultimate objective of organic unity between our respective organizations."

Oscar Ewing, Federal Security Administrator, told the convention that opponents of the Government's public health program are "stupid and dangerous." He accused the American Medical Association of hiring professional propagandists for large sums in hope of electing "reactionary" candidates in the November elections.

The AFL, in another resolution, alerted its members against the use of either Communist or anti-labor propaganda in school textbooks. The resolution asked that selection of textbooks be freed from the influence of "legislative or pressure groups" and left in the hands of teachers.

AMA Levy Alleged by Ewing

Ewing said the AMA has raised $1,100,000 through a compulsory levy on its members "in a drive to defeat every liberal-minded candidate for office this year."

Living Costs Continue Climb; Up 2.2% in Last 3 Months

Retail food prices in Washington declined 0.5 percent between July 15 and August 15, but prices of all goods and services advanced an average 2.2 percent between May 15 and August 15.

The three-month period covers the outbreak of the Korean war on June 25.

Although food prices were down for the month, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said a preliminary estimate showed they were 1 percent higher on September 15 than on August 15.

The slight drop in local food prices was led by decreases in fresh fruits and vegetables, which declined 17 percent. Fresh tomato prices were down 60 percent in the month, apples, 31 percent; potatoes, 20½ percent, and oranges, 4 percent.

Meat, poultry and fish prices averaged 2 percent higher during the 31-day period. Price increases were also reported for sugar, eggs, fats and oils, coffee and dairy products.

On August 15, Washington food prices stood 1.2 percent above a year ago and 41.6 percent higher than in June, 1946, the last month of Federal price control.

Clothing prices advanced slightly during the three-month period as did housefurnishings.

Nationally, the cost of living index rose 0.3 percent between July 15 and August 15, with increases in all major items except food, which showed an 0.5 percent decline. It was the first drop in food prices since before the Korean war.

Charge of Rape Is Reduced

A rape charge against James S. Smith, 29-year-old Alexandria contractor, was reduced to a charge of fornication yesterday in Alexandria Civil and Police Court.

At the same time, the woman in the case, Mrs. Mary B. Brumfield, 39, of Lynchburg, was convicted of adultery. Unable to pay a $25 fine, she was jailed.

Smith, who lives at 607 Columbus st., Alexandria, paid a $25 fine on the lesser charge and was released. Both appeared before Judge James R. Duncan.

The change in the charge against Smith was recommended by Commonwealth's Attorney Thomas Moore, who said evidence was insufficient to support the rape charge. Judge Duncan issued a bench warrant in the adultery charge.

Smith was shot in the right shoulder by police, who said they found him in an alley off Wythe st., Alexandria, at about 4 a. m. Sunday. He tried to run away, they said.

5 Jap Soldiers Give Up

Interior Aide Found Hanged In Stairwell

Andrew Mac Smith, 59, chief draftsman of the Interior Department's Reclamation Division, was found hanged at 6 p. m. yesterday in his home at 312 Shepherd st nw.

He was pronounced dead by Dr. E. L. Braddock of Freedmen's Hospital.

Smith's body was discovered by his wife, Elsie, when she returned home from work at the Veterans Administration.

Police said Smith was hanging by the neck from a 10-foot length of rope that had been secured on the second floor, and stretched down the stairwell. They reported Smith apparently had mounted a stool, then kicked it away.

Butler Wins Maryland GOP Senate Race

BALTIMORE, Sept. 22 (AP).—With only a few official figures missing, John Marshall Butler emerged today as the winner of the Republican nomination for the United States Senate, and William A. Gunter with the Republican nomination for State attorney general, in last Monday's Maryland primaries.

Baltimore City and Baltimore County will not complete the job until sometime next week, possibly Tuesday. But they can make no difference.

In the Republican Senate race, Butler, a Baltimore attorney collected 36 unit votes in the official canvass. With the 42 of which he is assured when the count is complete in Baltimore, Butler had 78 unit votes, one more than necessary for the nomination.

In addition, he has a decisive margin on the basis of unofficial returns from Talbot County and stands to gain four more votes there.

His opponent, D. John Markey, a retired National Guard general from Walkersville, collected 60 unit votes on the basis of the canvass. The only other ones he seems sure of picking up are the three in St. Mary's.

On the basis of the best available canvass and unofficial returns Markey held an edge in the popular vote, 31,608 to 29,627. But the nomination goes to the candidate with the most unit votes.

The official canvass figures have made no difference thus far in the contest between Governor William Preston Lane, Jr., and George P. Mahoney for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

The Governor still clung to 84 unit votes, with Mahoney having 68.

(The official Montgomery County canvass became available yesterday. It gave Lane 9734 votes and Mahoney 5415. In the Republican primary for United States Senate, Butler polled 3926 and Markey 1479.

Question Of Manners

How to treat Soviet delegates invited to social functions is a troublesome question at a time when Soviet-American relations are razor-edged. But the duty of a host still remains paramount, and this duty is still to hold to the elementary dictates of courtesy. Governor Dewey, it seemed to us, erred in this respect when he was playing host to the U. N. delegates at New York's welcome dinner in New York. The Governor included in his address a lambasting of Russia as a country which has interned from 10 to 15 million people in slave labor camps. Vishinsky walked out of the ballroom in protest.

This is probably the first time that a Soviet walkout has been justified. The truth of what Mr. Dewey said has been substantiated by many sources. The question is: Was it proper to make the charge before his guest? We think not. Any other place would have been in order for the statement, and we hope Governor Dewey, who has been making some excellent speeches of late on foreign affairs, will keep up his campaign. However, the amenities ought to be preserved by our officialdom on such occasions as the one at which Governor Dewey spoke.

Acheson's Lead

It is exhilarating to note the initiative of Secretary Acheson in appealing to the member nations to equip the United Nations with teeth. Gone is the feeling that the United Nations is merely a stepchild in American foreign policy. In truth the United Nations has become, as the orators had got into the habit of proclaiming, the base of it. The evidence is this move by Secretary Acheson and it was the logical outcome of the aggression and the U. N. resistance to aggression in Korea. The problem now is to make that experiment a precedent—to persuade the General Assembly to prepare the ground for organizing peace enforcement when the Security Council has been hamstrung by a permanent member.

This is a way around the veto which as abused by the Russians has crippled the Security Council. And it is perfectly permissible under the Charter. Of course, the Assembly can only recommend, but this is all that the Security Council can do, though a recommendation by the Assembly has back of it these days the mobilized opinion of mankind. The Secretary of State suggests a provision for calling the General Assembly into session within 24 hours, the setting up of a roving commission which would be empowered to move into any area of disturbance, and the earmarking of national contingents of armed men for specific service for the United Nations.

Here is the idea in embryo of the fire brigade that this newspaper has long pleaded for. It was the absence of such a force that nullified the effort of the League of Nations to cope with breaches of the peace. When the United Nations was organized, it was the central idea that this defect of the Geneva organization should be remedied. But the peace enforcement device in the Charter was in a state of atrophy till the ad hoc action in Korea. The Russians not only have blocked the Security Council from functioning, they have stymied all steps in the Military Staffs Committee to set up a U. N. force.

The United Nations without force at its disposal is like an orchestra without instruments. It is like a city without police. Some day, we may hope, the world will be so much in tune that force will be dispensable, but, so long as evil coexists with good, that happy day is long distant. In the meantime the member nations have every reason to know the beneficent effects of force in maintaining the world's peace—in particular the small nations. If the aggression in Korea had succeeded, all small nations would have been condemned to live in constant fear of sudden attack. Thus they should be the first to second the Acheson plea for safeguarding the peace so that mankind can pursue in quiet its quest for the dethronement of militarism and the enthronement of law.

Not that the proposal needs to be accepted as it stands. It calls for careful thought. It would dispose of the veto, which, though it has been condemned by many U. N. revisionists, had virtues that its abuse has disguised. The veto was the qualification which was inserted in the Charter to recognize the disparity among the member states. Having the major responsibility for resisting aggression, the great powers needed a special status in the United Nations. The equitable method of recognizing the unique position of the great powers would have been to give weighted representation to the member nations according to their power. But rather than attempt the formidable task of assessing the degree of power of the member states, the framers of the Charter introduced the veto, and provided otherwise for the equality of states.

What would take the place of the veto power in the new set-up requires earnest consideration. Perhaps it would be sufficient to safeguard the Assembly against irresponsibility by defining the kind of aggression calling for resistance. This might be simply the refusal of an aggressor to submit its case either to arbitration or a judicial process. But, whatever changes are made, the initiative that has thus been launched must move forward to realization.

Stampede

Panic and politics—and an irresponsible desire to go home—led the House of Representatives into a stampede late yesterday that overrode not only a presidential veto but a fundamental principle of American life. The President's message on the McCarran bill deserved more conscientious consideration. The exceptional importance he attached to it was attested by his unprecedented action in sending to each member of Congress a letter which urged that the issue be given sober and searching reflection. This was an appeal which, coming from the President of the United States, no member of Congress could decently ignore. It deserved the most serious thought. It should have taken debate on the measure out of the mire of politics into which it was plunged during its earlier consideration. It imposed upon the members of Congress a solemn obligation to review the issue not as Republicans or Democrats but as Americans responsible for the safeguarding of the Nation and of the Nation's distinctive and historic values.

The President's message presented, in our judgment, a carefully reasoned and compelling analysis of the McCarran bill. It demonstrated that, on strictly pragmatic grounds, the measure would injure the national security which its sponsors have sought to protect. Every agency of the Government entrusted with the responsibilities of safeguarding the country has informed the President that the bill would seriously impair its operations.

The President showed in detail that the registration provisions of the bill would in practice be wholly ineffective and would produce no information about Communists not already available to the FBI. He showed that so far as Communists are concerned, the bill imposes no penalties not already enforced and that it creates a grave danger that these penalties will be applied to legitimate activities by persons who are loyal citizens. He showed that the attempt to enforce the bill would entail a dissipation of energies needed for more effective internal security precautions.

The McCarran bill has made a tremendous appeal to patriotic Americans because it is anti-Communist in intent and appearance. But it will do no injury to the Communists. It will, as the President observed, "help the Communists in their efforts to create dissension and confusion within our borders." Mr. Truman offered an illuminating analogy to show the ineptness of the bill. "The idea of requiring Communist organizations to divulge information about themselves is a simple and attractive one," he observed. "But it is about as practical as requiring thieves to register with the sheriff."

Most of the message was devoted to demonstrating the disparities between the purposes and the effects of the bill. We are glad, however, that the President chose to lay before Congress the consideration of essential principle which justified his rejection of the measure. He presented as simply as it could be presented the basic American idea with which the McCarran bill is in irreconcilable conflict:

> There is no more fundamental axiom of American freedom than the familiar statement: In a free country, we punish men for the crimes they commit, but never for the opinions they have. And the reason this is so fundamental to freedom is not, as many suppose, that it protects the few unorthodox from suppression by the majority. To permit freedom of expression is primarily for the benefit of the majority, because it protects criticism, and criticism leads to progress.

It is this idea which the House overrode when it voted in such haste last night to reject the President's message.

Nobel Award

The work of the Nobel Peace Prize Committee must have been easier this year than on many occasions in the past. Dr. Ralph Bunche was the logical—indeed, almost the obvious—choice for its signal honor. As the United Nations mediator in the conflict over Palestine, he effected a just and reasoned solution in a situation that had explosive implications for the whole world. The outcome constituted not only an extraordinary diplomatic triumph but one which left all parties praising his personal qualities and his gift of leadership. All nations, as well as the disputants, were his debtors. The Nobel award comes, therefore, as the formal recognition of a great achievement.

Dr. Bunche remains now, as then, an international public servant. This is not because the President of the United States lacked awareness of his value; the President offered him a post as Assistant Secretary of State in 1949. Dr. Bunche declined at that time, in part because he believed he could be of greater use in the United Nations, in part because the Capital of the United States imposed difficult and humiliating conditions upon members of his race. Lamentably, therefore, Washington can hardly claim a share in his present triumph.

"While nothing is easy for the Negro in America," Dr. Bunche said some time ago in a commencement address at Fisk University, "neither is anything impossible. The barriers of race are formidable but they can be surmounted." He has demonstrated the validity of his own faith. Men of every race and every nationality will rejoice in the honor accorded him.

An Achilles' Heel

Former Justice Roberts' call for amendment of the Constitution so as to prevent Congress from withdrawing the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in cases involving constitutional issues revives an almost forgotten chapter in American history. In the reconstruction days following the Civil War a radical Congress was fearful that the harsh measures it was imposing on the South would be held unconstitutional. An editor named McCardle, who had been arrested and held for trial by a military commission in Mississippi under one of the Reconstruction Acts, petitioned for a writ of habeas corpus and carried an appeal to the Supreme Court. The Judiciary Committee of the House first reported out a bill providing that an act of Congress could be invalidated only if two thirds of the judges of the Supreme Court should concur. The bill provoked a furor and was dropped. Then the radicals took a harmless judiciary bill and attached a disguised rider repealing the entire appellate jurisdiction of the court under the Habeas Corpus Act of 1867, and prohibiting the exercise of such jurisdiction on any appeal that might be pending.

President Johnson, whose impeachment trial had already begun, indignantly vetoed the bill. But Congress overrode the veto and stopped the Supreme Court from handing down a decision in a vital case involving the liberties of the people. The incident stands as one of the most shameful encroachments on our constitutional system in more than a century and a half. Mr. Roberts also complained that in creating the Emergency Court of Appeals to review cases under the OPA regulations during World War II Congress denied the Supreme Court final judicial review powers. But it is the handling of the McCardle case that most pointedly exposes this Achilles' heel in the Constitution.

After listening to Mr. Roberts, the House of Delegates of the American Bar Association came out for a constitutional amendment definitely giving the Supreme Court jurisdiction in all cases arising under the Constitution. It is a wise precaution. In times of hysteria Congress is not always alert to civil liberties, as passage of the McCarran bill has just proved, and when it yields to popular demands for repressive legislation there is a strong temptation to prevent that legislation from being tested in the Supreme Court. The time to close the door to such potential acts of tyranny is before any specific threat has arisen.

Tenderness On Taxes

Omission from the interim tax bill of the House-passed provision imposing a 10 percent withholding tax on dividends will probably cost the Government close to 200 million dollars in revenue from failure of taxpayers to report receipts from dividends. The Ways and Means Committee estimates that in 1947, the latest year for which it was able to obtain relevant data, net cash dividends paid out by corporations amounted to 6.5 billion dollars, while dividends reported amounted to only 5.3 billion dollars—a difference of more than a billion dollars, of which about 300 million dollars might be accounted for as dividends paid to tax-exempt institutions and individuals. Owing to the large increase in dividend payments since that date, the amount of unreported taxable dividends is by now probably a billion dollars or more.

Although a large proportion of the revenue loss resulting from unreported dividends is probably due to the failure of taxpayers to keep accurate records of dividend receipts, the present loose system of reporting also encourages outright tax evasion for lack of adequate checks on returns. In any case this is a loophole for tax evasion and avoidance that should be closed, and we are not impressed by the argument that it would increase the paper work of corporations and the Government to reform the present system.

The withholding tax on wages and salaries involves a great deal more paper work than would be required to tap dividends at the source, and it, too, makes extra work for taxpaying wage earners and salaried employes. In neither case, however, does the withholding tax system increase anybody's taxes. As a matter of equity, regardless of the incidental cost and trouble involved, no group of taxpayers should be allowed to escape payment of their income taxes when it is possible to set up a control system that would discourage tax evasion.

OLD FENCE

I found an old fence weathers had derided;
Sun, rain and wind in company. Time, too
Had spurned the rough stile thoughtful hands provided
And gone the slow way through.

Rust and decay together had loosed nails
Out of their places, and a long forgotten
Want of repair left even the stoutest rails
Half under foot and rotten.

Clearer than any words the silence spoke
No further need for careful diligence
Where only pastured now such rooted folk
As is no gain to fence.

I fell to wondering whose had been the plan,
And what had stayed or swerved him from his task;
And looked about for sign of house or man,
But there was none to ask.

"Anticommunism"

In your note to my letter in your issue of September 16, you claim that "it is precisely the difficulty of determining whether an individual is a member of the Communist political organization, whether a group is actually a 'Red-front,' whether literature is in fact 'Communist propaganda' and what constitutes an 'attempt to establish a totalitarian dictatorship' that makes the McCarran bill so dangerous." According to this logic, any law which is unable to so closely define a crime as to make it difficult to determine whether or not it has been committed, is a dangerous law. According to this way of thinking, therefore, most laws are "dangerous laws," according to your expressed logic, and should never have been enacted.

There is a definition for this manner of thinking also. It is "Nihilism." But when we analyze this difficulty of determining what an individual or a group or an action "is," we find that all definitions are based on identification, i.e., treating one entirely individual event or symbols of an event as though it were another event or symbol of an event. The fact is that no two events were ever the "same," either in time or space, and to try to define anything, therefore, in symbols "as if" one event were the "same" as another, is a disheartening and somewhat futile undertaking. But it just happens that human nature is such that it conceives of order in what is essentially an orderless world, and in conceiving of order the human nervous system posts sentries around certain frames of reference and establishes discontinuities. Within this frame of reference the human nervous system creates classes. And it creates classes because this is the most convenient way to communicate for survival. Thus the human nervous system in certain organizations called countries and states has classified murderers, rapists, arsonists, robbers, forgers and other who have, on the happening or event level, actually been proven to have gone beyond, in their actions, the "imaginary" or conceptual boundaries around which we have posted our sentries to form our discontinuities or where "law," as a frame of reference, ends and "crime" as another frame of reference begins. The common reason for our establishing these frames of reference happens to be survival.

It is perfectly fatuous to argue, therefore, as you do in your "note" to my letter, that such survival techniques are "dangerous." Whatever your definition of "dangerous" may be, it is certainly not survival technique to permit individuals to act, without restraint, in the ways which the McCarran bill seeks to prevent. Every person who pleads constitutional immunity from self-incrimination is not upholding the "distinctive American liberty" of free speech. He is often protecting an imaginary "distinctive American liberty" of action, which, for the rest of us, has a nonsurvival implication. It is such action, not such speech, that the McCarran bill would prevent. As such it is not "dangerous" except to those who would destroy the very Constitution behind which they hide. REALIST.

"A Good Soldier"

The recent reference of Secretary Louis Johnson to "a good soldier" recalls another description; that of Jack London, from whom I quote:

"A good soldier never tries to distinguish right from wrong. He never reasons. He never thinks. He only obeys."

If he did reason or think he would ask the question, and you would be surprised how many are asking it, "What business have we, i. e., armed forces of the United States of North America, in Korea at all?"

Fair Reporting

Your readers may be interested in the following which appeared in Edward Weeks' "The Peripatetic Reviewer," in the September issue of The Atlantic.

When McCarthy made his accusation, the press in Boston splashed Lattimore's name in big type on the front page. But only the Christian Science Monitor thought it important to mention Lattimore by name when, in July, the subcommittee exonerated him in a report; the others didn't even bother to print the news that he had been given a clean bill of health in the minority report of Senator Lodge. I think this is a poor showing in a country which prides itself on fair play. Lattimore has been a target of evil slander, and the country deserves to hear of his vindication. The Washington Post, which followed the hearings day by day with scrupulous checking of detail, set an admirable example, and in the aftermath the New York Times gave a very fair resume of the committee reports. Arthur Krock in his column for July 11 paid Lattimore a fine tribute for the authority and correctness of his views on Korea; and in the later analysis by the Times of the committee report, the exoneration of Lattimore, Jessup, and Service was quoted at length. But of how many other metropolitan dailies was this true?

Perhaps this explains a lot about New England in recent months. READER.

Elections In Korea

As a close observer of the Korean situation during the past two years, I have been surprised and confused over South Korean Ambassador Chang's recent contentions that the Syngman Rhee government should have jurisdiction over all of Korea following the termination of hostilities there.

The United Nations General Assembly, in recognizing the Republic of Korea on December 12, 1948, declared that "there has been estalished a lawful government (the Government of the Republic of Korea), having effective control and jurisdiction over that part of Korea where the Temporary Commission was able to observe and consult" (italics mine). The obvious interpretation here would seem that the Republic of Korea was considered the de facto government in South Korea only. The remainder of that resolution and all subsequent directives to the Commission on Korea stressed the ultimate objective of unification—to be effected through the reconciliation of both viewpoints under United Nations auspices, not through the imposition of either regime upon the other. The United Nations, as a body, never indicated its belief that either regime would be adequate for the entire nation.

Another puzzling point is why Mr. Chang suggests the holding of elections only in North Korea after the termination of hostilities. It is true that South Korea held elections last May, but it is equally true that a vast majority of the citizens repudiated Syngman Rhee's regime. (Pro-Rhee groups won only 45 out of 210 National Assembly seats.) Since the South Koreans—who have amply tasted "Rhee-action"—overwhelmingly rejected the administration, what incentive could Mr. Chang possibly fabricate for the North Koreans, who have not lived under Rhee's rule? While they have undoubtedly experienced a repressive Communist dictatorship during the past five years, they have observed nothing which would make Dr. Rhee's regime appear an improvement. That government certainly did not do its part in seeing that "liberty, freedom and decency would not perish from the earth," or so it would seem from the 33,347 arrests made from September, 1948, to April, 1949. The United Nations Commission on Korea even said in its final 1949 report to the General Assembly that the South Korean government, which "has been somewhat nervous over the effect of critical press reports and comments on the maintenance of law and order . . . has closed seven important newspapers and one news agency in the period from September, 1948, to May, 1949."

Moreover, what indication has Ambassador Chang that the North Koreans would accept the republic's constitution?

Finally, if Dr. Rhee's regime has the overwhelming backing which Mr. Chang suggests, what has South Korea to lose by joining in a nation-wide election?

Korea's problem is grievous. The United Nations must do a great deal of soul-searching upon this issue. I do not believe its troops are fighting to impose the unpopular Rhee regime upon the Korean people. Let us hope that the postwar Korea it visualizes will be one of, for and by all the people of Korea and that its government will be elected by true, democratic procedure.

Combating Communism

One of the greatest tragedies of the ideological conflict we are now waging is the fact that we of the West have been maneuvered into a position where we now seem to oppose such traditionally noble and humane social objectives as peace, racial equality, economic justice, and the political self-determination of all nations. The Communists in our midst, for the nefarious reasons inherent in a movement conceived in philosophical error, have adopted these hitherto noble objectives as their very own, and the tragedy is that we have allowed them to do so. The recent Stockholm peace petition is just one case in point.

We must understand that merely because Communists everywhere have been able to capitalize on the real, fervent desires exhibited by the vast majority of the peoples of the world for these social objectives is no reason why we of the West should appear to stand in the way. Again the resurgence of honest nationalism and the hatred of colonialism so inherent in the people of Asia is just one case in point. Regardless of the fact that communism is allegedly also "for" these objectives, we should strive continuously, in act and deed, for the achievement of these goals, with this profound difference: We should state clearly to the world that our position is fortified, as the Communist position can never be, by the law of God. This law clearly tells men of reason that peace, racial equality, economic justice and the political freedom of all nations are social objectives which should be exalted to the highest. Only when the Christian world readopts this law, in word and in deed, and thus uses it to recapture the mind and soul of mankind, will our conflict with Godless communism be on sound, firm grounds, and surely the urgency of the world situation calls for nothing less than immediate action. Election Year Campaign

By Mark Sullivan

Bipartisan Policy

WITH ONLY six weeks left of the congressional campaign, there is still discussion about whether and to what extent foreign relations should be an issue. Spokesmen in behalf of the Administration say it should not. Republican spokesmen, while stating carefully that the party will support our war effort "to the hilt," declared that the Administration's foreign policy will be discussed in the campaign.

On this as on many public matters there is light in history, in this case very recent history. During the war the Republicans—in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, in Congress as a whole, and during elections—followed a nonpartisan policy, a policy of keeping foreign relations out of domestic politics. After the war this attitude was continued in Congress and in large part was continued into the presidential campaign of 1948, between candidates Truman and Dewey. Mr. Dewey supported the Administration policy of giving aid to European countries to help them resist communism on that continent. About the Administration's policy toward China, however, Mr. Dewey was critical. In a campaign speech he said: "Our Government watches . . . China . . . rapidly being overrun . . ." We must "bring an end to the tragic neglect of . . . China."

That mention by Mr. Dewey of the Truman Administration's policy about China was rather allusory, he did not press it, the policy was not made an issue in the campaign. Had it been an issue, had the country been fully informed about what the Administration was doing, much subsequent grief might have been averted, including what is going on in Korea today.

THE INFORMATION existed, what the country lacked was awareness of it, such as could have been brought about by emphasis on it in the 1948 campaign. Preceding the Truman Administration, President Roosevelt in February, 1945, at Yalta had made a secret agreement with Stalin by which Russia was promised that after Japan should be conquered Russia would be given Manchuria, a part of China which Japan had seized. This, with other advantages given to Russia in the Yalta agreement, gave leverage and momentum to the Russian Communist drive to overcome China.

This advantage to Russian communism was of course a corresponding and terrible disadvantage to the Nationalist government of China under Chiang Kai-shek, a practically fatal handicap to its resistance to communism. The handicap was increased by the policy the Truman Administration adopted toward Chiang and the Nationalist government; the Administration declared that he should enter into a coalition government with the Communists, and when he did not, suspended military and other aid we had been giving him during the war.

Had all this been made plain during the Presidential campaign of 1948 or otherwise, it would have been deeply offensive to the American people, and many of them would have grasped what experts knew, the future military consequences which the fall of China to Russian communism would have for us, consequences of which the beginning is now actual in Korea.

WITH THE immunity President Truman had from defense of his China policy in the 1948 campaign, he was free to focus on domestic issues, to appeal to the self-interest of groups. This he flagrantly did. To labor and to farmers he said, in the speech in which he accepted the nomination for President, that if they did not support him they would be "the most ungrateful people in the world." The appeal was especially successful in the case of farmers. To them Mr. Truman promised, in addition to existing favors by Government, a new one, Government provision of storage facilities for crops. By this narrow class and sectional appeal Mr. Truman carried six Mid-western States which had formerly been strongly Republican, and which in 1948 provided the margin of electoral votes by which he won. Had the Administration's China policy been an issue in the 1948 campaign, had it been made plain and paramount to the voters by Republican criticism of it and defense thereby forced upon the Administration, it is possible the farmers, made aware of this great national issue, would not have subordinated it to a group self-interest.

It is not necessarily material whether making the Administration's China policy an issue in the 1948 campaign would have changed the outcome. The emphasis on the importance of it and the public enlightenment about it would have been vitally useful, even after the Russian Communist drive to overrun China had reached the stage at which it was in 1948. It might have averted the Administration's later and especially damaging actions detrimental to Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist government.

By hindsight it is evident that no service was done the country by the Republicans' abstention from making any aspect of foreign policy an issue in the 1948 campaign. The hindsight may provide foresight in the present campaign.

East-West Conflict

Mutual Responsibility

By Marquis Childs

DURING THE past summer the nightmare threat constantly hovering over military and diplomatic planners was involvement in open warfare with Communsti China. This would have multiplied Korea 50 times over, and not merely in terms of manpower but in area and terrain as well.

Childs

The belief is growing that more than any single factor the influence of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru of India has kept this from happening. Nehru has urged the government at Peiping to remain neutral. Through his Ambassador in the Chinese Communist capital he passed on the statements of President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson that the United States intended no aggression against China and had no territorial aims on Formosa.

Yet Nehru today finds himself in a difficult position. The West, and particularly the United States, shows little evidence of understanding those difficulties or of lending a helping hand to solve them.

This can mean complete disaster in Asia and not in a matter of years, but in a matter of months. Some politicians insist on continuing the quarrel over who is to blame for China going Communist. They seem unable to understand that while this quarrel goes on, India may also be lost and with it the rest of Asia. For India today is the key, the last hope that a bridge can be built between East and West.

THE FIRST and foremost difficulty Nehru and his government face is one tragically recurring in India's history—food. A severe drouth in one area has seriously reduced the wheat crop. Floods in another region have cut down the rice crop. And the terrible earthquake in Assam has laid waste whole towns and villages.

In a letter to Senator Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, who has been working consistently to improve relations with India, Bishop J. Waskom Pickett, head of American Protestant Missions in Asia, said that help must come from America at once. According to Bishop Pickett, at least a million tons of wheat will be necessary to prevent widespread famine.

A second difficulty is the feeling that Asians are not consulted about problems directly concerning their destiny. Thus when President Truman issued his June 27 statement on Korea, Formosa and the other trouble centers of the Far East, British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks was shown the text in advance. But the Indians were not consulted. In Parliament in New Delhi on August 5 Nehru said:

"Old methods and habits die hard and the fate of Asia or of the countries of Asia is determined by leading statesmen of the Western world without much reference toward the countries of Asia who are most concerned. I do not complain about it. But I wish to point out the danger of trying to solve these problems without taking Asia into consideration. They simply come up against a blank wall."

Part of the old habit is to cling to vestiges of colonialism which remain, like the vermiform appendix in the human body, a source of infection and danger. Both Portugal and France have colonial dependencies in India and these are deeply resented. A voluntary plan for abandoning them, setting definite dates, would have a most wholesome effect throughout Asia.

RECENTLY, one of Nehru's chief political opponents, Purshottamdas Tandon, a white bearded, 68-year-old Orthodox Hindu was elected head of the Congress Party. This is an office of great influence, even as great, perhaps, as that of Prime Minister. Tandon is said to want to take a much more arbitary stand on the dispute between Pakistan and India than Nehru. The Prime Minister has insisted on patience in working out a peaceful solution over the disputed territory no matter how long it takes.

The worrisome, persistent quarrel between the two Nations has been like a festering sore. As long as it remains unsolved, Nehru's energies are divided and his position as mediator in Asia is weakened.

Because it seems to me that in India, and Pakistan, lies the key to future world cooperation, I am going to New Delhi to talk with Nehru and the members of his government and to Karachi to talk with Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan and the others who are trying to shape a modern state out of a part of the vast subcontinent of India. I want to try to understand what these men believe to be the mutual responsibilities of East and West, of Europe, North America and Asia in trying to reconcile the differences that have grown up over the years.

Bar Group's Final Session Urges Lawyer Loyalty Oath

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

The American Bar Association wants all States to pass a law requiring lawyers to take a loyalty oath.

As the association wound up its annual convention, it adopted a resolution on the loyalty oath as well as another calling for President Truman to sign the Communist control bill because of "world conditions."

Shortly after the latter ABA resolution was adopted yesterday morning, President Truman's veto message on the bill was read to Congress, which enacted it into law over the Presidential protest.

In urging a loyalty oath for lawyers, the ABA said it is not "inappropriate with world conditions as they are for any citizen to be required to attest as to his loyalty." The resolution emphasized the need of the test for lawyers because they "have much greater duty than citizens generally."

The association also urged establishment of a special committee to study Communist tactics of obstructing court procedure and law enforcement.

As the 10-day convention ended, District delegates said they would urge legislation making premarital blood tests mandatory here. In final sessions of the ABA House of Delegates, resolutions for four uniform laws were passed. Among them was the controversial Marriage License Application Act.

The proposed act would make marriage applications public records and would require certificates stating applicants do not have syphilis. The act also would require a five-day waiting period.

The House of Delegates also approved uniform prenatal blood test, probate and support acts.

The next ABA convention will be held in New York City on September 17, 1951, it was announced.

The last order of business was a rising vote of thanks to the District of Columbia Bar Association, the host organization for the convention here which had more than 225 separate events, and a host of dignitaries from a half dozen nations as speakers.

Bar Figures Are Challenged

By The Associated Press

The Justice Department, yesterday challenged the ABA's retiring president, Harold J. Gallagher, on figures covering political party affiliaton of men named to Federal judgeships in recent years.

In a formal statement, the Department said Gallagher was "in error" when he reported earlier this week that "since 1932, only eight out of nearly 200 appointments of Federal judgeships have not been Democrats."

Actually, the department asserted, 17 Republicans have been given lifetime appointments to the Federal bench since March 4, 1933, when President Franklin D. Roosevelt was sworn in for his first term.

Gallagher, a member of the late Wendell L. Willkie's New York law firm, charged the Democratic Administration with "a reversion to a spoils system" through appointments of party workhorses to judicial posts. Gallagher said this has kept some of the Nation's best legal minds off the bench.

The Justice Department's reply to Gallagher, mainly in the form of statistical tabulations, was to the effect that the two major parties have shown little if any difference in appointment policy for many years.

The statement said that when President Roosevelt took office judgeships distributed to 172 Republicans, 57 Democrats and two others of unknown affiliation. This gave Democrats 25 per cent in 1933, after 12 years of Republican rule, (Harding, Coolidge, Hoover), there were 231 U.S. of the jobs.

As of January 10 of this year, the last time a statistical survey was made, the Department said there were 308 U.S. judgeships held by 224 Democrats and 84 Republicans, a 27 per cent representation for the major party out of power.

There were 289 judgeship appointments during the Roosevelt-Truman years 1933-1950, with 272 of the new appointments going to Democrats, 17 to Republicans, according to the department.

It was noted that in 1921, at the end of eight years of President Woodrow Wilson's Democratic administration, there were 167 judgeships divided among 83 Republicans, 79 Democrats and five others of unknown affiliation.

During the Republican administrations of Presidents Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, 214 new appointments were made—191 going to Republicans and 20 to Democrats, the department said.

sive than the vote on original passage, which was 312 to 20.

In his long, strongly worded message, Mr. Truman singled out one provision of the bill which he said would be enough to justify his veto. This was Section 5, which he said would require the Secretary of Defense to "proclaim" and "have published in the Federal Register" a public catalogue of defense plants, laboratories, and all other facilities vital to our national defense—no matter how secret.

Mr. Truman said:

"I cannot imagine any document a hostile government would desire more. Spies and saboteurs would willingly spend years of effort seeking to find out the information that this bill would require the Government to hand them on a silver platter.

"There are many provisions of this bill which impel me to return it without my approval, but this one would be enough by itself. It is inconceivable to me that a majority of the Congress could expect the Commander in Chief of the armed forces of the United States to approve such a flagrant violation of proper security safeguards."

The President granted that Congress had no intention of achieving such results, but he said it was part of a "startling" thing about the bill—that, whereas it was represented as being "anti-Communist," it actually helped the Communists.

"No considerations of expediency can justify the enactment of such a bill as this," he said, "a bill which would so greatly weaken our liberties and give aid and comfort to those who would destroy us."

Mr. Truman pointed to another provision of the bill which he thought indicated that Congress, in aiming at one thing, may have hit something else. He meant Section 22, which, he said, would "exclude from our country anyone who advocates any form of totalitarianism or one-party government."

"Until now," Mr. Truman said, "no one has suggested that we should abandon cultural and commercial relations with a country merely because it has a form of government different from ours: Yet Section 22 would require that.

"As one instance, it is clear that under the definitions of the bill the present government of Spain, among others, would be classified as 'totalitarian.'

"As a result, the Attorney General would be required to exclude from the United States all Spanish businessmen, students, and other non-official travelers who support the present government of their country. I cannot understand how the sponsors of this bill can think that such an action would contribute to our national security."

The Chief Executive said at the outset that the Department of Justice, the Department of Defense, the Central Intelligence Agency, and the Department of State all had advised him that the bill "would seriously damage the security and the intelligence operations for which they are responsible."

Emphasizing that the bill would have results exactly the opposite of those intended, he said:

"It would actually weaken our existing internal security measures and would seriously hamper the Federal Bureau of Investigation and our other security agencies.

"It would help the Communist propagandists throughout the world who are trying to undermine freedom by discrediting as hyprocrisy the efforts of the United States on behalf of freedom."

Here, Mr. Truman listed seven principal objections to the bill, as follows:

"1. It would aid potential enemies by requiring the publication of a complete list of vital defense plants, laboratories, and other installations.

"2. It would require the Department of Justice and its Federal Bureau of Investigation to waste immense amounts of time and energy attempting to carry out its unworkable registration provisions.

"3. It would deprive us of the great assistance of many aliens in intelligence matters.

"4. It would antagonize friendly governments.

"5. It would put the Government of the United States in the thought control business.

"6. It would make it easier for subversive aliens to become naturalized as United States citizens.

"7. It would give Government officials vast powers to harass all of our citizens in the exercise of their right of free speech."

Referring to the provisions to require Communist and "front" organizations to register and make annual reports, Mr. Truman said that the idea seemed to be a simple and attractive one.

"But it is about as practical as requiring thieves to register with the sheriff," he said.

Mr. Truman argued that if an organization refused to register, a vast amount of time and energy would be expended in investigating it and trying to prove that it was required to register.

"This," he said, "would inevitably require the disclosure of many of the FBI's confidential sources of information and thus would damage our national security."

When the courts at long last found that a particular organization was required to register, he said, all that the leaders of the organization would have to do to do to frustrate the law would be to dissolve the organization and establish a new one with a different name and a new roster of nominal officers.

"Thus," he said, "the net result of the registration provisions . . . would probably be an endless chasing of one organization after another, with the Communists always able to frustrate the law-enforcement agencies and prevent any final result from being achieved. . . . To impose these fruitless burdens upon the FBI would divert it from its vital duties and thus give aid and comfort to the very Communists the bill is supposed to control."

Names of Democrats Voting to Uphold Veto

The 45 Democrats who voted to sustain President Truman's veto of the Communist control bill in the House yesterday were as follows:

Representatives Thomas H. Burke (O.), Wayne N. Aspinall (Colo.), Andrew J. Biemuller (Wis.), Richard Bolling (Mo.), Clarence Cannon (Mo.), A. S. J. Carnahan (Mo.), John A. Hazel Scott Assails Listings Of Artists as Red Supporters

Pianist Hazel Scott yesterday denounced as "guilt by listing" a published compilation of individuals, including herself, having alleged associations with Communist-front groups or activities.

In a personal appearance before the House Un-American Activities Committee, she branded the information "a lie" and the listing "vile and un-American."

Miss Scott, well known concert artist and wife of Representative Powell (D., N. Y.), was permitted to answer allegations contained in the publication Red Channels issued by the organization known as "Counterattack."

Red Channels describes itself as a digest of official reports issued by the House Un-American Activities Committee and similar groups such as the California Legislative Un-American Activities Committee.

Miss Scott told the House Committee she wanted to "clear the record that I am a Communist sympathizer," and added:

"I am not a member of the Communist Party. I never have been. I have never entertained the idea of being one, and I never will."

"I never heard of" most of the organizations with which her name was linked, she told the committee. In the other instances, she said, she appeared professionally by direction of her manager without prior knowledge of the nature of her activity.

She also proposed that musicians' and artists' unions in the future boycott radio networks or sponsors which suspend entertainers whose names are listed without proof of disloyalty.

"If an entertainer is dropped from a job because of a mere private accusation, the unions should forbid any other member from filling that job," she said.

McCarthy Enters Maryland Fight With Blast at Tydings

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) last night stepped into the role of "keynoter" in the Maryland Republican campaign to unseat Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) in November.

McCarthy took the stump with Theodore R. McKeldin, GOP nominee for Governor, in a Republican rally in the Hyattsville Armory, billed as the campaign sendoff for the party in Prince Georges County.

Tydings' opponent in the senatorial race is slated to be John Marshall Butler, 53, Baltimore attorney.

McCarthy attacked Tydings anew for his handling of the investigation into the Wisconsin Senator's charges of Communist penetration into the State Department. Tydings had reported to the Senate that McCarthy's charges were a hoax, and dismissed whitewashing allegation as "ridiculous."

McCarthy again hurled charges and criticisms of the Democratic Administration's handling of foreign policy. He struck particularly at Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson, at Gen. George C. Marshall, now Secretary of Defense, Ambassador-at-Large Philip Jessup, Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas (D., Ill.), and Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.).

Both Lucas and McMahon are up for reelection. McMahon served with the Tydings subcommittee investigating the McCarthy charges, and is chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy.

McCarthy said America is fast losing the world to communism, and charged the Administration is to blame.

He said there is an "Administration Democrat Party" and there is a party made up of millions of loyal Americans who have long voted the Democratic ticket. He said the two are not the same, and the Administration Democrat party "is no longer an American party."

He said the "Administration Democrat Party" had deserted the Democrats. He charged the Administration had become the party that protects Communists and hides corruption.

If they didn't like this picture, McCarthy told his listeners, they should vote Republican.

Senator McCarthy was applauded frequently by the crowd estimated at 800 persons.

McCarthy added that when he charged that there were Communists in the Government "Lucas provided the whitewash, McMahon brought the bucket, Tydings the brush."

"This trio—Tydings, McMahon, Lucas—in my opinion have done more than any others in this Nation to shield the traitors, protect the disloyal, and confuse Americans in their desperate fight to clean out the Communists," McCarthy said.

McKeldin, former Mayor of Baltimore and two-time loser in the race for Governor, applauded the McCarthy speech as one that was "factual, not factional."

"In Washington they don't know where in the hell they are going," said McKeldin.

"If you are going to get rid of that gang in Washington, you must start in the 48 Capitals of the 48 States," he added.

Another speaker was Thomas S. Carr, the Republican nominee for election to the United States House of Representatives from the fifth Maryland district, said "we need a change in Washington, we need a change in Prince Georges County, let's break up that machine."

Senator Tydings, asked for comment on the highlights of the prepared McCarthy speech, said part was "baloney" and the rest was "warmed over biscuits."

Antipollution Steps Taken

America is spending between five million and six million dollars at its Cumberland, Md., plant on the north branch of the Potomac. The company has changed its process several times to reduce water pollution. The new program, now in pilot plant stage, is expected to be completed next summer, and will further reduce waste by one-third. The flow of organic waste from the plant into the Potomac already has been reduced 26 percent since 1948, R. R. Sitzler, plant technical superintendent, told the group. The company is under order by the Maryland Water Pollution Commission to treat the remaining wastes.

3. The Savage River Dam, started back in Works Progress Administration days, will at long last be finished this December, Owen Hitchins, of the Upper Potomac River Basin Commission, reported.

According to Army engineers in charge, the dam will increase the flow of water in the upper Potomac from a minimum of 5 cubic feet per second during the low water period from July to November, to about 100 cubic feet. This will at least dilute the pollution.

Another, and probably even more important project has been started, with Pennsylvania leading the way. That is sealing off abandoned coal mines to prevent drainage from them into nearby streams and ultimately, the Poto-

Curiously the shutting off of the waste from the industries here, particularly the West Virginia paper mill, will result in increasing the damage downstream from the mine-acid waste. The mill wastes are alkaline in nature, and neutralize the acid from the mines. By cutting out the mill waste, the acid condition on the river will be felt far downstream.

Stassen Will Retain University Position

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22 (AP). Harold E. Stassen, Republican presidential aspirant in 1944 and 1948 and now president of the University of Pennsylvania, said today he intended to keep his present job but would take "a brief leave if the occasion arises."

The former Governor of Minnesota has been mentioned in published reports as being under consideration for a top post in the Defense Department under Secretary George C. Marshall. Stassen has denied the report.

Byroad Given Position In State Dept. Bureau

President Truman yesterday appointed Col. Henry A. Byroad as director of the Bureau of German Affairs in the State Department.

The President made the appointment shortly after signing a bill which permitted Byroad's civilian appointment without affecting his Army status.

Civic Group Asks School Stone Probe

The Federation of Civic Associations last night called on the District Commissioners and the Metropolitan Police to prosecute whoever is responsible for removing the cornerstone of Central High School.

Opening the discussion at the meeting in the Board Room of the District Building, Robert L. Tayler, the Federation's publicity chairman, said he had found in the police manual that illegal chipping or defacing of property could be punished by a $100 fine and six months in jail.

The District Board of Education this year changed Central from a white to a Negro school. It is now known as Cardozo High School.

At its Wednesday meeting the board asked School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning to find out if the cornerstone was removed legally. Until the ruling is obtained, the board deferred action on Corning's recommendation to give the cornerstone to the Central High School Alumni Association. It is now in safekeeping in the Franklin Administration Building.

In other resolutions, the Federation expressed its support of the Hager proposal to merge the District's white and Negro teachers colleges, opposed the use of Birney School for junior high school students, and donated $50 toward the establishment of a home for the Negro blind.

The President's Calling List

President Truman yesterday had the following White House appointments:

10:00 a. m. Presentation of fifth star to Gen. Omar N. Bradley, with Cabinet present.

12 noon. Representatives Douglas and Engle (D., Calif.).

12:45 p. m. Jacob Blaustein of Baltimore.

Called Sukkos, the Feast of the Tabernacles, it is a time when worshippers give thanks for the good things they received during the past year.

Its name comes from the "sukkoh" or booth which is constructed of twigs and branches in the temples, synagogues and homes as part of the celebration.

Salvaged Bell to Ring Again In Old Alexandria Church

A church bell that once tolled four days for the death of George Washington will, this Sunday, again add its voice to the chorus of Sabbath bells in Alexandria.

It's the bell high in the loft of historic Old Presbyterian Meeting House, South Farifax st. The oldest bell of its type in Alexandria, it was cast in 1843 of metal salvaged from the original one that fell during a fire in 1835.

It will ring shortly before 11 a. m., calling together worshipers for the first time since the church shut its door in 1889. More than 200 members of a congregation, which over a year ago reopened the building as a place of worship, will answer its call.

On hand for the first ringing will be the new pastor, the Rev. Kenneth G. Phifer; James H. Brown, the chairman of the board of deacons, and Capt. Irving L. Daniels, the man most responsible for the bell's renovation.

Daniels' interest in church bells dates back to his boyhood in Ohio. Even before the new congregation had begun worshiping, he had climbed the ladder to examine its rusty shaft and immobile mechanism.

A retired engineer, of 3717 Duke st., Daniels designed and made on his own forge an iron frame and support for a hammer, and gave the bell a test toll in June, on the church's first anniversary.

But he realized the necessity of repairing it for safety's sake, and the board of deacons turned the job over to a professional company. A steel frame was designed to replace the wooden one, and the bell is once again poised to return to its old calling.

The church, formerly known as Third Church, planned to move from 6th and H sts. sw., after a survey showed that 90 percent of its congregation had left the area. The H st. building was sold in 1944, with the congregation meeting until recently in the King David Masonic Temple, 12th and Monroe sts. ne.

Ex-Chaplain's Church Venture To Move to Large Quarters

A laboratory in Christian living is being conducted by a 33-year-old, blue-eyed former Army chaplain in a reconverted four-story mansion at 1707 19th st. nw.

It is called the Church of the Saviour and is dedicated to the proposition that a compact, dynamic and disciplined group committed to Christianity can have much impact on our way of life.

The church's congregation transcends both denominational and racial lines. It is what is commonly termed an "ecumenical church;" that is, one that works and prays for a united Christendom.

The success of the venture is shown by a scheduled move to enlarged headquarters at 2025 Massachusetts ave. nw., next month on its third birthday. It has an annual budget of $21,000, more than ttwice the figure of the first year.

The Rev. Newton Gordon Cosby, minister of the unusual group, believes in people putting into practice what Christ preaches.

Most of those regularly sharing in worship—now numbering around 150—come from that half-million segment of District individuals who weren't attending any church three years ago.

One of his church's striking differences is that members must take a year's study of Christianity before being accepted, then take an active position in the church after joining.

THE REV. NEWTON CROSBY
. . . "a demanding way of life"

The idea for the church came to the young preacher who as a chaplain with the 101st Airborne Division saw men die—not as Presbyterian, Methodists or Baptists—but as human beings. "They die that way," he thought, "why can't they live that way?"

After the war he talked to a few friends, many Army buddies and others whom he interested in what he called "a demanding way of life and a vigorous institution that would propagate it."

Mr. Cosby graduated from Hampton-Sydney College Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., in 1942.

Feller Beats Tigers, 4-3, on Gordon's Homer in 9th

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Those opportunists, the Boston Red Sox, who have never blown a chance to blow the pennant in the last three years, get another crack at their specialty starting tomorrow when they open a crucial two-game series with the Yankees. With the Yankees' willing help, the Red Sox threaten to make good again—and get into the World Series only as paying customers.

They're two full games behind the Yankees this evening, and anything less than a sweep of the pair here may extinguish the Bostons completely as pennant threats.

Povich

Manager Steve O'Neill has a contract to manage the Red Sox in 1951, but at this point he may be wondering if that is going to be any pleasure. At a time when they appeared to be ready to move into the league lead a week ago, they went into their worst batting slump of the season.

Acclaimed as the greatest collection of hitters in the league's history, the Red Sox made an awful mess of it on their recent near-fatal road trip. In seven of their eight games in the West, they scored a total of 17 runs. That used to be only a single afternoon's output.

THE THREAT of Ted Williams is nothing to terrorize the Yankees. The big fellow is a sad-looking sort, trying to take the same good Williams swing, with his lately fractured elbow. In the Red Sox' last four important games, two with Detroit, two with Cleveland, Williams collected only one hit—a high bounder in front of the plate that could have been scored as an error.

To get Williams in the line-up, O'Neil benched Johnny Pesky, a .313 hitter. Among some of the World Series cash-minded Boston athletes there is a fond hope that O'Neill will get the empty threat of Williams back on the bench, and Pesky back to the batting order. Williams' eagerness to play is commendable, but his hitting in his present convalescent state isn't.

In Cleveland, Lou Boudreau, who originated the special Williams shift to the right, didn't even bother to use it when Ted was at bat. The Indians' manager watched Williams stiff action in batting practice and then called the whole special defense off. The Indians played Williams like a straight-away hitter and had no trouble with him.

THERE'S ALWAYS a temptation to write the Red Sox off anyway, if it narrows to a showdown with the Yankees. They have no reputation to match the Yankees' habit of winning the tough ones. Last year in Yankee Stadium they took on an obvious case of jitters to let the pennant slip away in the last two games.

The Yanks may be lucky stiffs, at that. They drew two open dates before this big two-game affair with the Red Sox in their own stadium, and that means another period of rest for Joe DiMaggio. Big Joe, the early season flop who was benched by the Yankees, caught fire after a week's rest, and has been swinging their biggest bat ever since. A well-rested DiMag is something more for the Red Sox to contend with.

If the Yankees get over tomorrow's game, then they will be more concerned by what happens to the Tigers than the Red Sox. Going for the Yankees is the fact that the Tigers must play Cleveland four more games before the finish, two in Detroit, two in Cleveland. A relaxed, pressureless Cleveland team, no longer a pennant factor, can be rough on anybody, as the Red Sox learned in those twin defeats the other day.

ANYWAY, the Yankees are always at their best in the chips-down stages of the race. They rebounded from two defeats at St. Louis, moved into Detroit, and took two out of three with the pressure on. Licked in Chicago the next night, they romped home easily the following day to put more pressure on the Tigers and Red Sox.

For the second year Casey Stengel has had to riffle the Yankee line-up almost daily to keep a healthy team on the field. If he is playing hunches, and getting away with it, as some maintain, then the hunch system recommends itself. Al Simmons, coach of the Tribe, expressed frank admiration for Stengel the other day, "even though I suspect he's using a ouija board."

Eddie Lopat is Stengel's pitcher for tomorrow's game with Red Sox. He had hoped to rack the Red Sox up on Sunday by using his big pitcher, Vic Raschi. But Raschi is moaning about a lame shoulder, or something. So Stengel is in foul shape for Sunday, you might say. The only guy he can dig up to pitch against the Red Sox is Ed Ford, a kid who has an 8-0 record for his big league pitching career.

Wake Forest, Halts Rally, Holds B. C. To 7-7 Tie

BOSTON, Sept. 22 (AP).—A speedy Wake Forest football team that operated with little or no downfield blocking was held to a 7-7 tie by Boston College's inexperienced forces tonight before 12,324 fans at Braves Field.

Both teams were guilty of countless first-game omissions but the Southerners' flashy Nub Smith, Bill Miller and Guido Scarton gained enough ground to have earned a one-sided triumph.

An interception by Guard Bill Finnance, his second of the game, saved Wake Forest from defeat. With three minutes remaining, he snatched a pass that Dick McBride attempted to launch on the Southerners' 22-yard line after being trapped and driven back from the five.

That snatch ended Boston College's only sustained drive, which started on its 15-yard line. McBride hurled a 45-yeard aerial to Winger Johnny Sullivan and then contacted John McCauley, sophomore halfback, who was dragged down 5 yards from Wake Forest's goal line.

Wake Forest	STATISTICS	Boston College

6	Passes Completed	5
1	Passes Intercepted	3
5	Punts	7
26	Punting Average	37
0	Fumbles Lost	3

Wake Forest out-played Boston College by a tremendous, although futile margin during the early stages but did not make any real progress until late in the opening period.

Then Finnance started them rolling by recovering Frank Tanner's fumble on Boston College's 18-yard line. After the teams changed goals, Smith banged to Boston College's two-yard line and Miller went the rest of the way. Then Smith converted.

Boston College's third period score was set up by Joe Koch's feeble punt that rolled out on Wake Forest's 30.

A short rush by Fullback Ed Petela and two completed passes by McBride, the second heave an 18-yarder to Winger Mike Roarke manufactured the Boston College touchdown. Petela place-kicked the tying point.

Early in the finale, Wake Forest took a punt in midfield and drove to Boston's 20, from where Smith passed to Scarton on the 5. But a fourth-down completed pass, from Davis to Miller, traveled only about 3 yards, thanks to the smashing Doug Millette. From then on, Wake Forest was doomed for the deadlock.

Boston College	0	0	7	0	—7

GW Looks to Sophomores For Victory Over Virginia

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Sept. 22.—Bo Rowland will find out tomorrow whether his two-year building program at George Washington U. is a success.

At 4 p. m. (Washington time) his Colonials meet strong Virginia in the opening football game for both teams. The Cavaliers are 13½-point favorites.

A crowd of 18,000 is expected at Scott Stadium. More than 2000 of them will be G. W. rooters.

Fourteen of G. W.'s players are sophomores. Two of them, Tailback Jack Baumgartner and Guard Bob Allwine, both Washington boys, will be in the starting lineup. Jerry Furst, also a sophomore, will be in Virginia's starting team at right halfback.

However, with all the new faces, two old ones, are expected to provide most of the fireworks, Handy Andy Davis for G. W., and Johnny Papit for Virginia.

Davis, it was who passed and ran the Colonials to their 20-12 upset of the Cavaliers two seasons ago, and it was Papit who scored two touchdowns in last year's 27-13 triumph by Virginia.

Baumgartner, a 190-pounder, is expected to help Davis bolster G. W.'s running game which last season was thrown for a net of 7 yards lost by Virginia's line. Allwine, a 200-pounder from Anacostia High, probably will be a 60-minute player.

Both teams will be weakened on defense by injuries. Bob Weir, Virginia's star left end, is out with a badly twisted ankle. And Walt Savage, Joe Kennelly and Bino Barreira, all regulars in G. W.'s defensive backfield, won't suit up because of leg injuries.

Jimmy Lesane, Virginia's No. 1 quarterback and a good left-handed passer, is recuperating from a bruised left hand and may see only limited service.

However, typical of recent Virginia teams, there are lots of backs who can take up the slack. Left Halfback Steve Osisek is one of the best split T pitchout and pass men. And Rufus Barkley, 170-pound junior who used to play for Episcopal High in Alexandria, is also a good passer.

Papit, second in ground gaining last year, and Furst, a sprinter on the track team, will give the Cavaliers plenty of running power.

Tackles Dick Johnson of Alexandria and Bob Miller of Norwalk, Conn., a pair of 230 pounders will play more on offense than they did last year in an effort to help the Virginia attack even more.

Rowland's hopes for an improvement on GW's 4-5 record last year rest in his line, undersized and undermanned since the war.

Sophomores Frank Continetti and Tom Flyzik, who both weigh more than 220 pounds, will get their chance to gain some experience today although veterans Jim Feula, 195, and Clarence Drayer, 200, will get the starting call.

John, Wojtowicz, 210-pound guard, and Fotis Karousatos, 210-pound end, and Tom Englund, 210-pound end will also see lots of action for the Colonials. By the end of the year, all of them may be regulars. That's when Rowland believes G. W. will be in better shape than now.

Tribe Knocks Detroit Out Of 1st; Easter Bats in 3 Runs

By Joe Reichler

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 22 (AP).—Joe Gordon's home run over the left field fence to open the last half of the ninth inning gave the Cleveland Indians a dramatic 4-3 victory over Detroit tonight to knock the Tigers out of a first place tie with the New York Yankees.

The defeat dropped the Tigers one half-game behind the idle Yankees and cut their second-place margin over the Boston Red Sox to a game and a half.

The Tigers had rallied with two runs in the top of the ninth to tie the score at 3-3 when Don Kolloway followed Johnny Groth's two-out single with a homer over the same left field fence.

Feller yielded eight hits, one more than Newhouser, to rack up his fifteenth triumph.

Gordon Subbed For Avila

Gordon's game-winning clout came with startling suddenness. The fans, resigned to watch extra innings in the coolness of the night, had hardly sat back in their seats when Gordon caught hold of Newhouser's second pitch and lofted it high over the fence 375 feet away.

It was the former Yankee second baseman's nineteenth homer of the season.

Oddly enough, the only reason Gordon was in the lineup was because young Bob Avila, who had beaten him out of the regular job, was out with a leg injury.

Until the Tigers came through with their thrilling last-ditch rally, it was all Feller, with the help of big Luke Easter. Feller had a four-hitter going into the ninth. The only run the Tigers got off him was unearned. A two-base error by Larry Doby on Johnny Lipon's single, followed by George Kell's one-bagger with two out, accounted for Detroit's lone tally.

Easter's 102d RBI

Easter, with a homer and single, had accounted for all Cleveland's runs. The giant Negro first-baseman caught hold of Newhouser's 3-2 pitch in the first inning and blasted it over the right-field fence. The homer, Luke's 28th of the year, came with two out and Doby on first. The latter had drawn the first of Hal's four bases on balls.

After Detroit had cut Cleveland's 2-0 lead in half in the third, Easter put his team in front, 3-1, with a line single to right that scored Dale Mitchell from third. It was the 102d run he has driven in this season. Again there were two out when Luke came through.

In the ninth, after Kolloway's game-tying clout, the Tigers put the winning run in scoring position on a pair of infield hits by Joe Ginsberg and Newhouser. After a conference with Manager Lou Boudreau, Feller settled down and got Lipon on a grounder to third for the final out.

38,000 to See Opener

Maryland Favored Over Georgia Today

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

ATHENS, Ga., Sept. 22.—Heralded Maryland and hopeful Georgia open their football seasons tomorrow in one of the Nation's top attractions.

The kickoff comes at 3 p. m., Washington time, and a near capacity crowd of 38,000 is expected at Sanford Stadium. The weatherman, finally acknowledging the presence of football in Dixie, has promised a "cool," cloudy day with the thermometer to go no higher than 81. It was 88 today.

These same teams played to a thrilling 20-20 deadlock in the 1948 Gator Bowl game. Tomorrow's game, the first of a four-game series, figures to be another lulu.

Maryland is rated a six-point favorite. Practically everybody except Jim Tatum, director of Maryland's split-T attack, agreed.

"Ridiculous," he commented when he heard his Terps were favored shortly after the squad arrived in Athens at 2 p. m.

Tatum later on admitted he thought his Terps would win "if we can score three times."

He said the same thing before last January's Missouri-Maryland Gator Bowl game. Maryland scored three times and won, 20-7.

With the exeception of quarterback, where they were weakest last year, and at right end, where a sophomore has come along to replace Fred Davis, Maryland has practically the same team which lost only one game in 1949—a 14-7 defeat by Michigan State.

The left side of the line—which Tatum calls the best in college football—is intact. That's End Elmer Wingate, Tackle Ray Krouse and Guard Bobby Ward. Krouse, out with flu for the last three days, reported he felt fine and was ready to go.

Maryland's split-T attack has been intrusted to two sophomores, Jack Scarbath, a sharp pitcher from Baltimore, and Bob DeStefano, a better ball handler, from Providence, R. I. As members of Maryland's fine freshman team last year, they were great.

The bulk of Maryland's running attack will be handled by Junior Bob Shemonski, a good break-away dasher, and Mighty Mo Modzelewski, a Steve Van Buren type of runner. Sophomores Joe Petruzzo and Ed Fullerton, the regular fullback, will help out.

Georgia, which has lost only three games here in 12 years, is trying to rebound from a disastrous 1949 season which saw the Bulldogs win only four games. Coach Wally Butts, who can be as doleful as Tatum at any given hour, admits this is his best team since the war, or since Charlie Trippi.

Carolina Adopts 'Stand-Up' Huddle

Vengeful Michigan State, LSU Ready for Oregon State, Ky.

By Steve Snider

NEW YORK, Sept. 22 (U.P.).—Sidelights on Saturday's football headliners:

Revenge is the motif in two of the week's best—Louisiana State at Kentucky and Oregon State at Michigan State . . . LSU, Southeastern conference champ, blew a 19-0 decision to Kentucky-led Vito Parilli last season and it hurt almost as badly as the Sugar Bowl debacle against Oklahoma . . . Michigan State took its fancy-stepping crew West for a lark in '49 and collapsed, 25-20, at Oregon State.

North Carolina picked up something from Notre Dame besides a defeat at Yankee Stadium last year . . . the Tar Heels will present their version of the Notre Dame "stand-up" huddle against North Carolina State Saturday . . . instead of facing the line of scrimmage as the Irish do, however, North Carolina lines up in a two-row huddle—facing the bench.

At least three top-fighters should emerge as stars in their own right Saturday after playing second fiddle in the headlines. . . . Dick Bunting of North Carolina replaces the fabulous Charlie (Choo Choo) Justice; Dan Wilde of Texas Christian takes over for Landy Berry; Kyle Rote of Southern Methodist is the big wheel of the Mustangs with Doak Walker now a pro. . . . Bunting runs against N. C. State, Wilde against Kansas and Rote against Georgia Tech this week.

Vito Ragazzo of William and Mary gets his first warmup against VMI Saturday night. . . . He caught 15 T. D. passes last year, a new collegiate record.

Tip-off on Maryland's true strength may be revealed against Georgia Saturday . . . Coach Jim Tatum calls it "my best team," but until he proves it with a top quarterback to replace the graduated Joe Tucker, Maryland rates as just another tough team . . . Big Jim has two ripe All-American candidates, though, in Tackle Ray Krouse and Guard Bob Ward.

After the last Rose Bowl game, Coach Lynn (Pappy) Waldorf of California said, "I don't know who'll represent the West in 1950 but it sure won't be us" . . . He lost heavily by graduation but West Coast observers will keep a sharp watch on the power-packed Bears against Santa Clara Saturday, nevertheless . . . Pappy has quantity and perhaps quality.

Soft-touch openers are losing caste for financial reasons these days but a few coaches don't mind a bit . . . Tennessee's powerhouse opens against Mississippi Southern, Vanderbilt against Middle Tennessee and Alabama against Chattanooga. . . . Quite a contrast to Oregon vs. UCLA, in the Far West.

Pounded Like North Koreans

Army Life's Tough—Just Ask 'B' Squad

By Red Smith

RED SMITH

"The guys on defense?" said Beaver Bevan, West Point's estimable trainer. "They're the B squad. Poor guys. When you put that yellow sweater on, you're just a North Korean up here. Fellow came out of scrimmage bleeding and I started over to fix him up. 'Don't bother about me,' he says. 'I'm on the B team.'"

Over their uniforms the shorn lambs of the B squad wore big heavily padded aprons which hung to their knees, serving as a partial armor against the assaults of the varsity players.

"Makes them look like the picadors' horses in Mexican bullfights," a bystander remarked. "Down there they pad the nags with big mattresses before they turn the bulls loose on 'em."

"The principle is just the same here," it was explained. "The padding conceals the wounds."

Red Blaik, West Point's commandant of violence, was using alternating backfields. When one group ran a play, the members of the others stood with the coach and watched attentively. There was no waste of words or motion. The Army attack, which will begin formal operations next Saturday against Colgate, looked familiar. At least most of the operatives did.

Now there'd be a running play with Gil Stephenson or Jim Cain or Vic Pollock or Jack Martin running the ball. Now big Al Pollard would move in at fullback. Now the coach's son Bobby who has taken over at quarterback after his apprenticeship behind Arnold Galiffa, would fake a handoff and throw a pass to one of the backs or to Dan Foldberg, the captain, or Al Conway, the other end. It was an exception when a pass was not completed.

FRANK FISCHL, a regular halfback temporarily undergoing repairs, was present but not in uniform. Wearing a gray sweat suit, he stood a little removed from the action watching others practice his assignment.

"Who's that?" A visitor asked, as a stranger carrying the ball bounced off one of the padded defenders.

"Gene Filipski."

"Oh, sure."

The name was familiar, anyway. Two years ago, when the National Coaches Association held its annual convention in California, several of the membership met Filipski. One of them happened to be Red Blaik. Red gave him the formal grip practiced by members of the coachly lodge upon meeting a strapping stranger, clasping the right hand letting the left fall lightly upon the boy's shoulder in a sort of paternal pat.

They chatted for a few moments and parted.

"Jeepers-katy!" Red exclaimed softly to a companion. "Did you feel the back muscles on that kid?"

AFTER PRACTICE, the coach observed that the time was getting woefully short. Only a week to go before the Colgate game, then Penn State, then menacing Michigan in New York on October 14.

"The Navy game seems a long way off," he said, "but it won't be. First thing we know it'll be on us."

Army has been slow to develop offensive polish, he said, slower than the squad was in spring practice. He thinks this is due to the necessity of changing players to unfamiliar positions in the line, moving guards to end and so on. Even a comparatively minor shift like switching an end from the left to the right side involves extra instruction and study and delay because the man must learn a new stance, a new charge and new assignments.

"If just one player like an end is uncertain of his job," Blaik was asked, "does that tend to mess up the whole eleven?"

He nodded. "More or less. If you have to stop to explain something it slows everybody up and the others get impatient."

A CASUAL VISIT to a practice field doesn't reveal much about how any football team will operate under pressure. On the surface this looks like a standard Army squad. Solid officer material, that is. During practice, the sidelines were fairly solid with officers, too. Spectators included the superintendent of the Military Academy, the bursar, four full professors and the chaplain. Not in every college do the upper echelons manifest such interest in sweaty pursuits.

Colonel Orrin Krueger, West Point's graduate manager, was the only noteworthy absentee. He'd gone down to New York for a dinner for H. Jamison Swarts, Pennsylvania's director of intercollegiate athletics for 25 years, who is transferring to the university's purchasing department.

The dinner brought a large gathering of friends Jim Swarts has made in football, in his work with the Olympic committee, in his quarter-century as director of the Penn Relays. They came from all over the East, from the Big Ten, and from the Pacific Coast, to say hail and farewell to the man who was moved out of his job because Penn authorities decided he wasn't good at making friends.

When Penn's president, Harold Stassen, announced the changes in the athletic staff, he declared, in effect, that he was confident Penn could have winning teams without breaking the rules too much. The program will demand skillful handling if Penn is to have as many friends as Jim Swarts left.

Oliver Fires 62 to Lead Kansas City Open With 134

Burke Has 69, Trails by One Stroke

By Skipper Patrick

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 22 (AP).—Ed Porky, Oliver, the good-natured round man from Seattle, Wash., today toured the Milburn Country Club in 62, 10 strokes under par, to take the 36-hole lead in the $15,000 Kansas City Open golf tournament with 134.

Playing near-perfect golf from tee to green on the 6645-yard, par-72 layout, Oliver was out in 30, six under par, and came in with a four-under 32.

At that, Oliver was only one stroke ahead of little Jack Burke, jr., of White Plains, N. Y., who had a 69 for a 135 total.

Oliver was happy over his game today because "it proves to me that I'm playing my best golf."

Misses Record by Stroke

Oliver came within one stroke of the PGA tournament record. It was the fourth 62 of his career. He got his last previous one in the St. Louis Open last week, only to have Dow Finsterwald, Athens, Ohio, amateur, set a PGA record of 61.

Oliver's iron shots were great. He missed three greens, but his approaches never failed. He came from the rough on No. 10 within 6 feet of the pin and holed his putt for a birdie 3. Exceptionally good chips set up birdies on 16 and 17.

Toughest hole?

Lloyd Mangrum, Chicago, shot his second 68 for 136 and took third place.

Snead Has 72—142

E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, St. Andrews, Ill., and Doug Ford of Briarcliff, N. Y., shot 67s and shared the 138 bracket with Skip Alexander, Knoxville, Tenn., who had a 70 today.

Jim Ferrier of San Francisco needed 71 strokes but remained in a contending position with 139.

Finsterway continued at the top of the amateur class with a 72 for a 143. Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, was a stroke away at 144.

The score of 150 was the qualifying limit for the third round of 64 shooters.

Sam Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., was still in the running with a 70 for 142. Cary Middlecoff, former United States Open champion from Memphis, Tenn., and Ormond Beach, Fla., shot his second 73.

Nats Oppose A's in Final Home Stand

The fifth-place Nats, conceded a cellar berth by most of the experts before the season started, make their last home appearances 8:30 o'clock tonight and 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at Griffith Stadium.

Opposing them will be the Philadelphia A's who have a lock on the American League's eighth place. One of the biggest disappointments in baseball history, the A's have an excellent chance of leaving town with an even 100 losses.

That would make two for each of Connie Mack's 50 years in what was supposed to have been a golden year on his golden anniversary.

It won't be a completely drab evening tonight, though. Comedian Jackie Price will perform his hilarious pregame exhibition, starting at 8 o'clock.

The Cuban influence on the mound, responsible to a large degree for Bucky Harris taking the club higher than even his best friends had hoped, will be in evidence.

Tonight Julio Moreno will pitch. Moreno holds a 12-4 decision over the Mackmen. Tomorrow the latest Latin acquisition goes—Carlos (Potato) Pascual. The 5-foot-5, 19-year-old speedball artist recently purchased from Havana.

The Nats leave town Sunday to take their key role in the pennant race—they play four games at both New York and Boston.

Sandberg Wins Fight

GOTHENBURG, Sweden, Sept. 22 (AP).—Bob Sandberg, Rockford, Ill., lightweight, won an eight-round decision tonight over Sylvain Therouse of France.

Chisox Buy Back Johnny Ostrowski

The Nats' Johnny Ostrowski was re-purchased yesterday by the Chicago White Sox for the $10,000 waiver price.

Ostrowski, long-ball hitter when he hit, came to Washington in the swap that brought Bob Kuzava and Cass Michaels for Ray Scarborough, Eddie Robinson and Al Kozar. Ostrowski batted .222 in 21 games for the White Sox. Now after 54 games with the Nats, his average is .223.

'To the Showers You Must Go . . .'

Joe Judge Man of Distinction—Recalls Being Only Player Sung Out of Game by Umpire

By Bill Gilbert

JOE JUDGE, Nat's great first baseman of two decades ago and now Georgetown University baseball coach, tells this one on himself:

"I was called out on strikes one day and the umpire, after calling me out, stooped over to dust off the plate and wouldn't look at me when I started howling.

"He just kept sweeping and started singing, 'You can't hit the ball with the bat on your shoulder'." When I called him a red-necked so-and-so, he sang 'To the showers you must go, you must go, you must go, must go to the showers you must go.' I went, and became the only man ever to be sung out of a ball game."

ONE OF THE first area football coaches to be called into service probably will be Don Hogan, former Gonzaga High star. . . . Don, 20 years old, coaches Blessed Sacrament in the Catholic Youth Organization League. . . . He is a member of the Naval Reserve and expects to be called soon. . . .

Redskins Take Off for Game With Packers

Those unbeaten Redskins left by plane yesterday for their National Football League engagement with the Green Bay Packers at Milwaukee Sunday.

Washington is seeking its seventh victory in a row, but only one means anything so far. That was the 38-14 win in the league opener at Baltimore last Sunday.

Coach Herman Ball refused to be too optimistic about Sunday's game, despite Green Bay's 45-7 loss to Detroit last Sunday. He was anxious to get to Milwaukee early to get the team acclimated and plans a light workout there today.

The odds-makers don't share his concern, whether it's real or imagined. They've installed the Redskins as 20-point favorites.

President George P. Marshall, who leaves by train today to bring up the rear guard, snorted, "That's ridiculous, perfectly ridiculous. There's no such thing as a 20-point favorite in our league. We'll be quite content if we can win."

Suggs Leads Sunset Open

CARROLLTON, Ga., Sept. 22 (AP).—Whipping fall winds didn't bother Louise Suggs and Patty Berg in the second round of the $3,000 Sunset Hills Ladies Invitational golf tournament today but they practically blew Babe Zaharias out of contention.

Louise, a home town product whose father operates Sunset Hills Club, shot a 73 and led Patty by one stroke after two rounds in the 54-hole tournament. Miss Suggs' 36-hole total is 144 to 145 for Miss Berg, a veteran professional from Minneapolis.

Babe Zaharias shot her first 82 "in about four years" to fall from a first round tie with Louise to sixth place with 153 strokes.

Off Hains Point

Sailing Races Over Weekend Close President's Cup Regatta

By Happy Walker

The month-long President's Cup Regatta winds up today and tomorrow with sailing races on the Potomac.

There was every indication that the races will draw the largest field in history.

Two flights are scheduled today off Hains Point. The first starts with the Star class at 10 a. m., followed by nine classes at five minute intervals. Second flight starts at 2 p. m. with the third flight at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Ben Minor, race chairman, announced late yesterday that the brother and sister racing team of W. D. Sampson Smith and Dorothy Smith of Cooperstown, N. Y., are on hand with their sleek Star craft. Other late Star entries are Daniel Hilbers, Essex, Md., and Col. P. Meville.

Race officials estimate that the diminutive Comet class will outstrip the field in entries while the Thistle class appears to be runner-up. An unexpected entry in the Thistles is Gordon K. Douglass of Painesville, Ohio, birthplace of the Thistle.

Classes other than Stars, Thistles and Comets are Chesapake 20s, Lightning Hampton-One-Designs, Chesapeake 16s, Snipes, Tempests and Penguins.

Today's Program:

Hy Wins at Marlboro, Clinches Sprint Crown

Miss Prime Runs Fifth; $345 Double

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

MARLBORO, Sept. 22.—Hy was first to greet the judges at the finish of the Clinton Purse today, featuring a rather dismal day at the races for a crowd of 4,000. The victory by Mrs. Helen Reightler's 4-year-old clinched the sprint championship of the meeting which closes here next Tuesday.

This was the third meeting of the session of Hy and J. N. Barnes' Miss Prime but the expected stretch battle between that pair failed to materialize. Miss Prime was used up early and finished fifth in the field of six, marking only the second time in 19 starts this year that she has been out of the money.

Remembrance 2d, Length Back

Hy, with Doyle Gardner the leading rider here in the saddle, had to be driven to the limit to win by a length from Mrs. D. N. Lee's Remembrance. This 3-year-old closed like a speedboat on the muddy track and would have been the winner in a few more jumps. J. A. Manfuso's Alluring was third.

Hy was an even-money favorite but her backers were satisfied with the $4 mutuel after seeing her go all out to win. Her time was 1:26 1/5 for the 6½ furlongs. The track was not holding, but last night's rain had sunk in.

Alluring gave Hy assistance. The Tiger filly raced Miss Prime into defeat in getting to the front. However, Gardner was rating Hy. When Miss Prime dropped out of it, Hy was placed to pressure and took command. As mentioned before, however, Gardner had to shake up his mount in the final drive to stave off Remembrance.

$345.80 Daily Double

The victory was the seventh for Hy in 17 starts this year. She is trained by C. A. Cranford of Washington, D. C.

Jimmy Baird, second to Gardner in the jockey standings, rode two winners, taking the opening event with Mrs. T. L. Mitchell's Country Dude, at $5.60, and the third with G. W. Taylor's Wise Mahmoud, at $9.80. The daily double on Country Dude (3) and Always Late (6) paid $345.80.

JUG RUNNETH OVER, TWICE—Rain twice wrecked the running of the fifth annual "Little Brown Jug" classic for 3-year-old pacers at the Delaware (Ohio) Grand Circuit meeting. It was first postponed Thursday, again Friday. It will be run today, weather permitting. Here is barefooted Mrs. Charles Hinkle on the muddy half-mile oval showing why $56,000 classic was delayed.

The Federal Diary
by Jerry Kluttz

'Outstanding' Ratings Will Go to Very Few Under New System

Very few Federal workers will be given "outstanding" ratings under the bill cleared yesterday by Congress to streamline the efficiency rating system.

Before the conferees agreed to a final report, the Civil Service Commission promised to issue regulations requiring the supervisor of any employe who is rated "outstanding" to write a detailed report to support the top rating.

Furthermore, any employe rated "satisfactory" will have only a limited right to appeal for an "outstanding" rating. He can appeal to either his agency board or the Civil Service Board, but not both of them. An employe rated "unsatisfactory" may appeal both to his agency board and later to the Civil Service Board.

Kenilwork Ave. Route Is Recommended As Fastest Drive From Landover Area

Have you wondered whether you are taking the quickest route to work? Traffic Tricks, recommended routes developed from the Regional Highway Planning Survey of Metropolitan Washington, has the answer on the fast way to get to 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

RESIDENTS of Peace Cross, Cottage City, Colmar Manor, Landover, Bladensburg, Cheverly, Capitol View, Radiant Valley, Landover Hills, Md., and Trinidad, in the District, should take this route—

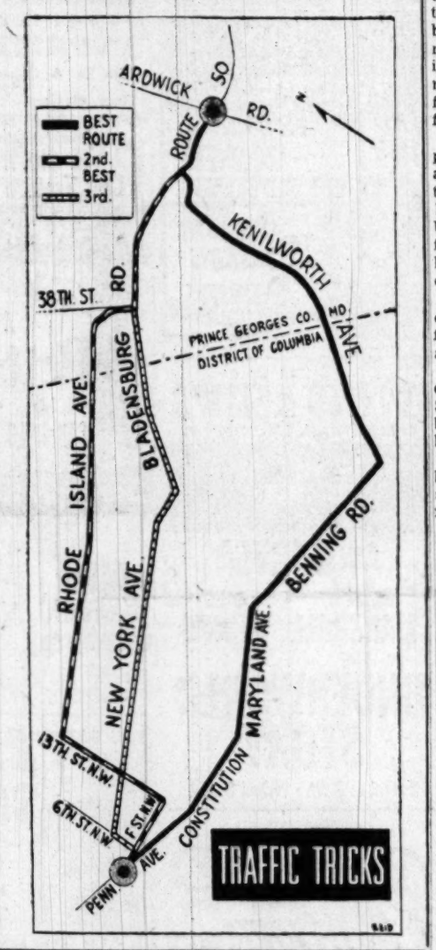
From the intersection of Route 50 and Ardwick rd. at Landover Hills, take Route 50 or the Defense hwy., left to Kenilworth ave. (sometimes called River rd. in Maryland), right on Benning rd. ne., across the Benning bridge, left on Maryland ave. ne., right on Constitution ave., right on Pennsylvania ave. nw. to 14th st. nw. In peak hours, take H off Benning, then left on 14th ne. to Maryland ave. ne., since a turn from Benning to Maryland ave. is banned.

The average peak traffic time is 34 minutes for the 10.1-mile distance. From the original intersection it should take 18.5 minutes to the bridge.

THE ADVANTAGE of this route is the saving in time on Bladensburg rd. over either Rhode Island or New York ave. routes.

Other routes: Take Route 50 on to Bladensburg rd., right to 38th st., left on Rhode Island ave., left on 6th st. nw., right on E st. nw. to 14th nw. Time 40 minutes for 9.4 miles; 11 minutes to Peace Cross.

Or, take Route 50 on to Bladensburg rd., right on New York ave. ne. and nw., left on 12th nw., right on E to 14th st. Time: 45 minutes for 9 miles; 11 minutes to Peace Cross.



Senate Sets 1950 Limit On Day Care

Operating Funds Are Approved Only To End of Year; $50,000 Voted

A $50,000 fund to run Washington's child day care centers only through December 31, 1950, was approved by the Senate yesterday.

It was one of the actions that preceded final congressional approval of the supplemental appropriation bill. The Senate cleared the compromise measure by a voice vote, and sent it to the White House.

The day care center appropriation, made from District funds, was scaled down by House insistence to an amount that would let the centers operate only to the end of this year—barring some later reversal by Congress. Little chance is seen that such a change will be made.

In its final form, the supplemental appropriation bill also carries $100,000 for launching the District civil defense program, hardly more than a third of the $290,000 urged by the District Commissioners.

Other District funds in the bill include: $113,100 for the rent control office, including $34,000 to pay terminal leave; $46,000 for beginning construction of an 18-room addition to the Browne Junior High School at a total cost of not more than $717,600; $15,000 for a surplus property revolving fund.

Also $600,000 to put the Metropolitan Police on a five-day week, and $40,000 to give Park Police the same; $148,789 for payment of District shares in expenses of United States Courts here; $59,000 for out-patient services at Gallinger; $320,000 to cover pay increases of wage scale employes.

The bill also carries one million dollars toward purchase of a site for a second major Washington airport.

Also included is authority to draw $12,750,000 from the U. S. Soldiers' Home trust fund for building a new 842 bed barracks building, and a 210 bed hospital.

Another 15 million is in the bill for additional Federal office space, of which three million is for use within the District.

D. C. Library Asks for 3 New Branches

Three new branch libraries in Anacostia, Bennings and Cleveland Park are requested in the proposed public library budget released yesterday

The budget for the fiscal year beginning next July calls for a second bookmobile and an increased staff to extend service of the first bookmobile recently put into use.

The board of library trustees also asked the Commissioners for funds to purchase sites and prepare plans for branch libraries in Tenley and Congress Heights areas.

The budget requests in total were for $2,482,546, nearly a million dollars more than the current appropriation.

Part of the increase would provide for salaries of 36 additional library staff members.

Six of the new employes are requested to man the bookmobile which now operates with three employes on a three day a week basis in the Congress Heights and Bennings areas. Additional staff would permit scheduling the bookmobile in other sections of the city and at night. Nine employes are sought for the second bookmobile. The new unit would cost $10,000.

Justifying the expenditure for the bookmobile program, library officials said that expansion of this type of service will permit the scrapping of plans of 11 branch libraries. The new libraries would cost $1,610,000, while the total capital outlay for the bookmobiles is $20,000.

The libraries asked for a management officer to study organization of the library with a view to increasing efficiency and reducing costs.

D. C. Appoints Four Additional Legal Aides

The Commissioners yesterday announced the appointment of four assistant corporation counsels authorized under the District's 1951 budget. They are:

Conlyn and Coleman will be assigned to the criminal branch of Municipal Court. The duties of Umstead and Earnest are as yet unspecified. Conlyn, Coleman and Earnest will receive $3825 yearly; Umstead will receive $3100.

Detective's Son, 9, and Pal Help Catch 2 Arson Suspects

By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post

Charles Cranford helps Marshall Courtney try on a police sweater

Like father, like son, they're saying about the Cranford men, now that 9-year-old Charles has helped his detective father catch a pair of alleged firebugs.

And, Watson, please give co-credit to 10-year-old dead-eye Marshall Courtney of 3924 2d st. sw., who is a Post carrier boy.

This detective story is laid in two churches and a school.

It seems a couple of weeks or so ago the Covenant Baptist Church was entered and vandalized.

Charles and Marshall did not know of the crime at the time. All they knew was that they saw two boys, about 11, hurry out of the church and "jump us."

A little later Charles mentioned the incident to his father, Detective Richard Cranford of the Eleventh Precinct.

A few days passed. Then sometime between 5 p. m. last Sunday and 7 p. m. Monday firebugs entered the Congress Heights Presbyterian Church and burned the organ and some of the furniture.

Other than the arson in the second case, the two crimes bore striking similarities: in both, food in the church kitchens was dumped on the floor, in both furniture was overturned—apparently just for the sake of doing it.

Detective Cranford deduced that the persons who entered the Covenant Church were the same as those who entered the Congress Heights church. And he remembered that Charles and his playmate, Marshall, had seen two boys leave the Covenant church after the crime.

The detective asked Charles and Marshall if they could identify the boys. They said they thought so. They believed they went to the same school as Charles and Marshall themselves—Patterson.

So on Thursday Detective Cranford went to the school and the boys pointed out one of the suspects in class.

He promptly confessed both to going into the Covenant Church and setting the Congres Heights church organ afire, Detective Cranford said. And the boy himself led detectives to his partner in the school.

Yesterday Charles and Marshall were trying on Charles' dad's police jacket for size—too big, still—and submitting themselves to an interview. They were asked what they want to be when they grow up.

"Policeman!" shot back Marshall. No prompting.

Charles, the detective's son: "Dunno. When I go to a police station I want to be a policeman. When I go to a fire station I want to be a fireman . . ."

'To Fulfill Effort'

Owner Wills D. C. Concern To Employes

The late A. Gales Johnson, owner of a booming mail-order home-building business here, has willed the company to 13 employes.

The unique bequest was made "in the hope that these employes will work in harmony and fulfill my many years of effort to develop and make available low cost housing," Johnson's will read.

Johnson died September 13 at the age of 65. He lived at the Cairo Hotel, 1615 Q st. nw.

He founded Standard Homes Co. 32 years ago, and more recently, New Homes Supply Co. The two concerns advertised in rural newspapers in the North and Midwest, and mailed out floor plans, blueprints, lists of materials, and construction hints to prospective home-builders.

The companies were valued at more than $160,000 in the will filed for probate yesterday.

Daniel T. Morgan, 9214 Pine Tree rd., Silver Spring, Md., was left 13 percent of the business and was recommended as president. Clyde E. Phillips 9620 Bexhill dr., Kensington, Md., was also left 13 percent, and named first vice president. L. Keith Hite, 4370 N. Pershing dr., Arlington, Va., was left 11 percent, and was recommended as second vice president. Miss Miriam C. Camp, 2122 California st. nw., was left 11 percent, and named secretary-treasurer.

Other employes who will become the new owners of Johnson's business, with the percentages they inherited, are:

George P. Black, 5036 Park pl., Brookdale, Md., 13 percent; Mrs. Etha T. Connor, 3801 37th st., Cottage City, Md., 6 percent; Edward G. Carson, 3016 S. Buchanan st., Arlington, and Miss Jo Carol Rose, 1002 Barnaby ter. se., 5 pecent each; Mitchell D. Smith, 5 percent; Miss Ruth Lee Rose, of the Barnaby ter. address, 5 percent; Margaret A. Calhoun, 1717 O st. ne., 4 percent; Miss Dorothy A. Southgate, 4 percent, and Miss Shirley V. Boehm, 1312 Maryland ave. ne., 4 percent.

Loan Agents Found Guilty Of Assault

Two loan company investigators were found guilty yesterday in Fairfax Trial Justice Court of assaulting a housewife while trying to repossess her husband's car.

Mrs. Margaret McKeown of 11 Belleview dr., Fairhaven, charged that Charles O. Jamison of 1525 16th st. nw. slapped her in the face and that Chauncey T. James, 813 7th st. nw., pushed her at the front door of her home.

The two men testified they are private detectives and were employed by the Liberty Loan Corp. of Silver Spring to repossess the car. They denied the charges and appealed $100 fines levied against each by Trial Justice Harry Garrico. They were released on $250 total bond.

James and Jamison said Mrs. McKeown swung a milk bottle during a conversation about the car, grazing Jamison's lips and knocking ashes from his cigarette into his eye. They also testified that the husband, Robert McKeown, came out of the house after that and knocked down James.

James said he told Mrs. McKeown "that was a common trick he used on me," referring to the fact that McKeown earlier told James he could find the car in Centerville, Va. He looked for the car for four hours and didn't find it, he told the court.

Mrs. McKeown testified she flicked a cigarette out of James' mouth and picked up a milk bottle after Jamison slapped her, but she denied striking anyone

Her daughter, Barbara, 19, testified she saw Jamison slap her mother in the face and saw James shove her into the bushes. She called her father, she said, and McKeown went after James. She said, "No, not that one, this one." By that time, McKeown told the court, he had hit James.

James and Jamison said they tried to swear out a warrant against Mr. and Mrs. McKeown, but that while they were at the police station, they heard a police call to pick them up. They said they then felt there was no use in having two warrants issued in the same case, they said.

Chest Drive Plans Funds For Armed Forces Aid

Wider Activity To Meet Service Problems Seen As Essential

Washington area Community Chest leaders yesterday raised by $160,000 the goal of the fund drive starting October 12 to provide a special fund for the "armed forces and other services related to the emergency."

The action increased the goal from $4,100,000 to $4,260,000—a boost of $710,000 above the amount raised last fall.

The increase was unanimously approved by the executive, campaign and budget committees of the Community Chest Federation of the National Capital Area meeting at the Washington Hotel.

Just how the money would be spent, or whether it will all be needed next year, is not yet known. But Charles E. Smoot, chairman of the federation's budget committee, gave these reasons why the money should be raised now:

Large scale mobilization will create a demand for recreational, religious and counseling services by men in uniform and problems for their families at home that cannot be met under the present quota. Agencies providing services to the armed forces are being reactivated and expanded. They will have to raise funds, preferably through the Chest. It would be better to set up a reserve fund now than to wait and "face multiple piecemeal campaigns as each need develops."

Smoot's motion to increase the goal provided that the money would go into a special fund and be allocated after the campaign "when the needs are clarified and the agencies to fill them are better known."

The group agreed to an amendment offered by Philip L. Graham, publisher of the Washington Post and member of the federation's executive committee, that if the drive should fall short of its goal the armed forces fund would be cut no more than any participating Chest agency or fund.

W. Mark Shields, budget committee member, objected to fixing a percentage for the armed forces fund. He pointed out that the extent of its need is not yet known and that the sealing off of these funds from other uses might tie the Chest's hands in dealing with its local agencies.

Graham and others held that if the community is to be approached for contributions to an armed forces assistance fund, there should be a guarantee that the project would not be dropped if the drive failed.

The suggestion that goals here and elsewhere be increased to include an armed forces fund originated with the Community Chests and Councils of America.

Under the old goal, the Chest had budgeted $71,727 for Associated Services for the Armed Forces, which consists of three agencies formerly affiliated with the war-time USO—the Jewish Welfare Board, the YMCA and the National Catholic Community Service. If the drive succeeds $231,727 would be available for the armed forces and other problems brought on by the national emergency.

Two New Polio Cases Listed

Two new polio cases were reported to District health authorities yesterday, bringing the current year's total here to 134.

The new cases were listed as a 3-year-old girl of the first block of Defrees st. nw., admitted to Gallinger Hospital September 21, and a 20-year-old man admitted to the Naval Hospital at Bethesda August 31.

According to health department records, 68 polio cases had been reported in the District at the same time last year. No new cases were reported yesterday from nearby communities in either Maryland or Virginia.

Long Distance Calls Easier After Today

A $3,950,000 automatic switching system to improve the speed and accuracy of long distance telephone calls will be put into service today and Sunday by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

Installation of the intricate central office equipment, known as the "A4A Toll Switching System," began in December, 1949, and was completed last August 5.

J. R. B. Crigler, vice president and general manager of the company, said that, with the new system, certain long distance calls, once dialed by the operator, proceed entirely automatically. All connections are made mechanically and proper circuits are selected by the equipment in accordance with dialed codes.

"About the only clew customers will have as to when the system is in operation will be faster service on certain long distance calls," Crigler said.

According to Crigler, an average of 14 minutes was required in 1920 to put through an out-of-town call. Today, he declared, the average is about two minutes and the operator toll dialing system will reduce this interval still further.

Installation of the new equipment is part of a Nation-wide program to gradually extend the toll dialing system throughout the country. The system is already in operation in Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Oakland, Albany and Boston.

On Shirley Hwy.

Four Hurt In Head-On Auto Crash

Four persons—one a seven-month-old infant—were injured in a headon crash of two automobiles at 9:30 p.m. last night in the southbound lane of Shirley hwy., just behind the Pentagon.

Park police said a car driven by Joseph A. Pugh, 34, of Roanoke, Va., collided with one driven by Silas Hutchinson, 26, of 2910 13th st. nw.

According to police, witnesses said Pugh's car was zig-zagging south on the highway and Hutchinson's car was at a standstill. The latter told police he became confused when he realized he was in the wrong lane.

With Hutchinson were his wife, Cora, 19, and their daughter, Frances Carol, seven months. All three were admitted to Emergency Hospital

Pugh—who went through the windshield, according to witnesses—was first taken to Emergency Hospital, then transferred to Gallinger Hospital. He was in "undetermined" condition with head injuries.

Blast Burns Porter

Jimmy Banks, 21, of 1939 17th st. nw., a porter at the Meridian Drug Store, 1600 U st. nw., suffered burns of the face and arms last night when the door of a gas stove in the store kitchen blew out.

Police Officer Is Cleared in Beating Case

A police trial board yesterday cleared Pvt. Albert N. Shutta of the Tenth Precinct of a charge that he had used unnecessary violence with a prisoner.

Walter Richbow, jr., 30, a laborer, of 1213 Morse rd. se., had accused Shutta of beating him on the street and in the 10th Precinct stationhouse after he was arrested for investigation May 27.

As a result of a blow on the side of the head, he declared, he suffered a punctured eardrum. Medical testimony brought out that Richbow had been treated for such an injury at Gallinger Hospital after his arrest.

However, two doctors testified there were no abrasions outside the ear to indicate a blow had been struck. Shutta's superior officers testified that he is one of the most capable and even-tempered policemen at the Tenth Precinct.

In a second trial board action, Pvt. Vernon C. Sanders of the First Precinct was fined $75 after pleading guilty to failing to communicate with his station and failing to patrol his beat. Sanders explained that he had been ill and that he fell asleep in the firehouse at New Jersey ave. and E st. nw.

'Reluctant Inductee' Enters Jail, Not Army

A 22-year-old Brentwood, Md., man, who skipped his $5000 bond to be inducted into the Army Thursday, was "inducted" into Hyattsville Jail a few hours later, police reported yesterday.

The double inductee is Donald K. Grove of 3826 37th pl., Brentwood. Police, who described him as a "hot rod" driver, arrested him September 12 after a wild, 85-mile-an-hour chase.

On Thursday Grove was due in Hyattsville Police Court for a hearing on three traffic charges. His total bond was $3000.

When he failed to appear for the 10 a. m. hearing, Brentwood police checked his home.

Neighbors told them young Grove had been drafted and was reporting for induction at the Arlington Farms Center in Arlington.

Police arrived at the center with a warrant just after Grove was sworn into the United States Army and was about to leave for Fort Meade, Md.

Air Force First Lieut. Donald Knott, who heads the induction center, surrendered the new inductee to Brentwood police. Grove was packed off to Hyattsville Jail and his bond canceled.

In Hyattsville Police Court at 10 a. m. Monday, Grove faces these three counts: larceny of an auto, operating on a revoked permit, and exceeding the 25-mile speed limit.

Hyattsville police said a total of 10 other traffic charges by Mount Rainier and Hyattsville police still are pending against Grove and have not yet been brought to trial.

Four More Housebreakings Make Total 10 in K St. Area

Four housebreaking complaints within a single night have been reported in two blocks of K st. nw. to Third Precinct Police.

Police said the housebreakings, which occurred Thursday, capped a series of about 10 reported in the 17th and K st. area within the past two weeks.

Thursday night's housebreakings, they said, netted $57 in change and a string of pearls worth $200.

Complaints have been lodged by Lavinia V. White, manager of the Shute-In's Craft Shop, 1764 K st., where a thief entered through an unlocked rear window and tried to chisel open a safe; by Nathan Lewis, an employe of the Gift Shop, 1604 K st. nw., where a panel in a rear door was cut and an attempt made to chisel open the safe; the Normandy Shop, 1628 K st., where a cash register was rifled of $57 in change, and Gertrude L. Moorehead of Atlantic City, N. J., who said her car, parked at 17th and K sts., was broken into during the night and an Oriental pearl necklace worth $200 taken.

Abbott and Costello Up to Usual Tricks

By Richard L. Coe

NOW WHAT CAN you say that will be crisp, interesting and informative about a picture called "Abbott and Costello in the Foreign Legion"?

The informative part is easy: it's at the Capitol.

But being an old Abbott and Costello fan dating back several hundred of their movies, I find it difficult to crash through with any more newsy angles since the title itself so thoroughly decribes the goings-on.

Don't get me wrong. I'm simple-minded and enjoy the boys, but to further describe what the title already makes patently clear seems futile. It boils down to watching the team as a couple of Brooklyn wrasslin' promoters who've had their massive star, one Abdulah, an Arab, run out on them.

This takes them to an Algiers that never was. You know, beautiful women behind those veils and absolutely no odors to assault your schnoz. Before they're in Algiers a day they've been tricked into the Foreign Legion, which leads to what you may imagine.

But though the outlines may be trite, there is fun in watching the boys struggle against the clumsy fates. They've an eye-filling female spy to contend with in Patricia Medina. Walter Sleazak is a treacherous Legionnaire and Douglas Dumbrille a snaky sheik ("shake" you pronounce that one) and Wee Willie Davis plays the overpowering Arabian wrassler.

In short, "Abbott and Costello in the Foreign Legion" isn't their best effort, but it certainly isn't their worst and their admirers will certainly get some of the laughs they expect.

The Capitol's stage bill is headlined by Jayne and Adam DiGitanos, the dancing stars you may have watched on TV if you hadn't seen their showy routines before. Johnny Morgan's comedy antics are skillfully delivered and even leading the Sam Jack Kaufman band isn't beyond him. Claire Hogan, the week's songbird, has some tricky switches of rhythm and manages to get a deal of audience participation into her final number. The Four Moroccans, a showmanly tumbling team which seems to have slipped off the screen's comedy onto the stage, begin the live program.

"ABBOTT AND COSTELLO IN THE FOREIGN LEGION," a Universal release, produced by Robert Arthur, directed by Charles Lamont, screenplay by John Grant, Martin Ragaway and Leonard Stern. At the Capitol.

THAT ELEGANT British comedy, "Kind Hearts and Coronets" is in its last day at the National and if you miss it, you miss a good one.

CELESTE HOLM is delighted with the reception she's had in the Gayety's New York-bound comedy, but she does think everyone's been short on recognizing the value of her vehicle, "Affairs of State."

"Nor do I see it as a vehicle," remarks Miss Holm. "I think that too seldom does the writer of a light comedy get the credit he deserves. Louis Verneuil didn't set out to write any earth-shattering comedy. He just wanted to amuse people and I think he's even succeeded in writing a satire on his theme. When Terence Rattigan's 'O Mistress Mine' opened with the Lunts and Brooks Atkinson noted they might just as well have been reading the telephone book, he got the same sort of treatment. No, it takes a genuine talent to spin out such fluff and I'm sorry Mr. Verneuil so far hasn't gotten the credit he deserves."

Off-stage Miss Holm is quite a different person from the Cinderella Jane of the Gayety's play or the Ado Annie which socked her to a triumph in "Oklahoma!" She's a far more mature woman than you'd expect, a mellowness of outlook giving her a serenity at once unexpected and charming. Her ivory skin must be the envy of the soap companies and her violet-blue eyes have an awareness which commands your immediate respect. Her longtime friend Katharine Glover entertained Miss Holm yesterday at her I st. home.

When she'd been playing Ado Annie for 15 months, a minor incident prompted her to give up the part. Acting the perfect lady and thinking nothing about Annie, she was out dancing one night after the performance. A woman on the floor pointed to her and screamed: "The funniest woman in the world. Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! and kept laughing at her. "And what makes it funnier" the roaring admirer continued," is that I'm from Kansas City, too!"

That made it clear to Celeste that if she didn't get out of Ado Annie's skin, she'd be typed forlife. Oscar Hammerstein understood and since then there have been a score of Annies.

"Hollywood's been unusually good to me in that respect," Miss Holm muses. "I've had a real variety in my parts, done musicals, straight drama and comedy. Such variety isn't most people's fate in Hollywood and I hope my luck continues."

Luck couldn't call on a more intelligent lady.

A BARRAGE of letters and phone calls informs me that the engrossing Spanish picture at the Plaza, "Madness of Love" is an adaptation of a classic play . . . This is Manuel Tamayo y Baus "Locura de Amor," and it's been loved for many generations . . . The most noted players of the leading parts were Dona Maria Guerrero and Don Fernando Diaz de Mendozo, who were to the Spanish theater what Sothern and Marlowe and Lunt and Fontanne have been to our own . . . I'm glad I admitted my ignorance by remarking that what I knew of the period could be engraved on the side of a dime . . . This seems to be in its final days, but it's certainly engrossing.

OLNEY winds up its most successful season yet with four weekend performances of Franchot Tone and Margaret Lindsay in "The Second Man." . . . Congratulations of Richard Skinner and Evelyn Freyman for this enviable partnership which has put Olney among the top four of the Nation's summer theaters.

Poor-Box Thief Gets 90 Days

A 24-year-old Maine man was convicted yesterday of stealing the poor box from St. Mary's Church,725 5th st. nw., on Sunday, July 30, and sentenced to serve 90 days in jail.

Lorenzo E. Morin admitted to police he had shaken $1.07 from the box before he was arrested the following day. There was $17.91 in the box.

When the case first came up in Municipal Court, Morin was sent to the hospital for treatment. His case has been continued three times at the Government's request since August 15.

Judge George D. Neilson sentenced Morin to serve 90 days in jail, but ruled that he should receive credit for the time he has been in jail awaiting trial.

The Rev. Charles Boelmer of St. Mary's, told police he had seen Morin in church on several occasions before the box was stolen.

Winifred's Powder Gives Smooth Finish

Seventh day of Winifred's beauty program.

By Ann Lawrence

FACE POWDER, to Winifred, was something to pat on to keep her nose from shining. Nothing more, nothing less. In buying her powder, she made the same mistake she had made in her other cosmetics: a rose-pink tone in complete discord with her naturally gold-tinted skin.

The result was a blotched look, for her summer tan showed through. Since she did not use her powder correctly, she didn't even manage to achieve her primary purpose—taking the shine from her face.

A good face powder should have at least three qualities to recommend it. It should stay on. It should not cake. It should give a smooth, soft finish to the face. And of course, it should harmonize with your own skin tones to flatter and bring out the color of your hair and eyes.

WINIFRED'S new powder was mixed especially for her, after her skin had been studied under a strong, revealing light. The color ingredients were a light brown, a dash of bluish pink, (all powder must contain some rose tones or the result will be sallow and faded) a generous portion of golden rachel, and a soupcon of green (yes, really!) to play down the pink and play up the beige-y hue. Mixed and blended and re-mixed until each separate color disappeared, the final product was a golden, honey tone. As her tan fades and her skin takes on its "winter" coloring, she can take this powder back to the cosmetician who will adjust the shade to meet her new requirements.

Proper application was the next step.

WITH A CLEAN PUFF, she fluffed the powder over her neck, face and forehead, with a heavy, heavy hand. She looked as if she had dunked her face in a flour barrel but that was precisely what was wanted. Then, with a clean pad of cotton, she brushed the excess away, starting at the base of her neck, and working up and out, right up to the hairline.

With the proper foundation, rouge and powdering, the doll-like, baby-faced look disappeared. In its place, Winifred's own clear skin showed through, with its golden glow to make her face seem more alive and attractive.

Hate Not the Great

Sometimes we envy and begrudge . . . The people who are great . . . And wish their glory would have been . . . Our fortune and our fate . . . We do not know why praise should go . . . To them instead of us . . . Or why they ride in limousines . . . While we go on the bus . . . And yet the facts are simple and . . . The truth all too plain . . . That it is through their guidance that . . . We make our greatest gain . . . It is their leadership in life . . . That paves the golden way . . . To more enduring comfort and . . . Atlantic Pact Talks Here Will Not Mean All Work for Envoys

By Elizabeth Maguire

STAR-STUDDED occasions will fill the party calendar, when defense ministers and chiefs of staff of the twelve North Atlantic Pact countries hold meetings here from October 12 through the following week.

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, USA, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Mrs. Bradley will hold a reception at Fort Myer Friday, October 13, and the French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet will entertain at dinner at the Embassy on Saturday, October 14.

A series of other parties are doubtless being planned by the chiefs of mission of Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Great Briatin, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway and Portugal.

Dates have not been set yet, but it's certain the big-wigs will have no time on their hands between meetings.

MRS. PERLE MESTA, United States Minister to Luxembourg, is sailing for home next Wednesday aboard the French liner Liberte. As usual there are rumors. Some say the feminine diplomat may ask the President for a new post.

PARTY PARADE:

The Chief of Staff of the French Navy, Admiral Roger Lambert, was the guest in whose honor the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, USN, and Mrs. Sherman entertained last evening at a dinner on Observatory Circle. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Greet, and Col. and Mrs. Curt C. Schiffeler.

A dinner was also given last evening by Gen. and Mrs. Omar Bradley at Fort Myer for Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Clarence Ralph Huebner, who have just returned from Germany. Miss Juliette Huebner, their daughter, was among the guests.

Miss Louise Melissa Cahill and Miss Joan Harper Pennington are entertaining this evening at a buffet supper party for Miss Molly Holden, debutante daughter of Dr. Raymond T. Holden. After supper guests will be taken to the Chevy Chase Club for dancing. The party will be held in the apartment of Miss Pennington's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James A. C. Pennington.

Miss Cahill, a debutante of this year, is the daughter of Mrs. James A. Cahill. Guests will include Miss Geraldine Garrity, Miss Betsy Goodloe Porter, Miss Nancy Kear, Miss Suzanne Wise, Rex Peters, William McGonegal, John Thomas Crowley, Charles H McEnerney, jr, Benjamin Henry Dorsey, jr., and Armiger Louis Jagoe, jr.

JEWELS AND FASHIONS:

The Hope Diamond and other gems will be shown at the opening luncheon of the Women's National Press Club on Wednesday, September 27, in the ballroom of the Mayflower. A fashion show will be presented by Charles James of New York, and A. J. Baril, New York furrier. Austine and Mrs. Gladstone Williams, both members of the club, will commentate on the latest in furs, gems and fashions.

Ruth Montgomery, president of the club, will preside.

ALONG EMBASSY ROW:

The Ambassador of Canada and Mrs. Wrong are giving a small dinner at the embassy Tuesday evening to say farewell to Ralph E. Collins, first secretary at the embassy, and Mrs. Collins, J. R. Murray, also first secretary, and Mrs. Murray, and Jean M. Cote, second secretary. The officers are returning to Ottawa the first of October.

MRS. GILBERT HITCHCOCK, who spent the summer traveling in Europe with Miss Carolyn Nash, will sail September 27 for home. Miss Nash is expected to arrive a week earlier.

CONGRATULATIONS TO: Mr. and Mrs. Jean Delattre-Seguy, grandparents of Edward Everett Bartlett, 3d, born September 20 to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Carey Bartlett of Plainfield, N. J. Mrs. Bartlett is the former Miss Nicole Delattre-Seguy of Washington.

LITERARY DEPARTMENT:

"Run, Mongoose," new novel by Washington's Burke Wilkinson, will be published September 26. Mr. Wilkinson and his wife, the former Miss Frances Proctor of Boston, Mass., live in Georgetown in a modern house, shining new, that fits in admirably with its older surroundings.

The author's first novel, "Proceed at Will," was published two years ago. "Run, Mongoose," his second novel, is a fast-moving story which takes its characters from secret Dublin meetings to violent rendezvous in Jamaica. Articles by Mr. Wilkinson have appeared in Liberty, Sea Power, Yachting, Shipmates, Saturday Evening Post and Collier's.

Mr. Wilkinson was educated at St. George's School and Harvard, and did a year's graduate work at Cambridge University. His war service as a United States Navy officer (1941 to 1945) included harbor defense work, Admiralty Liaison in London and the Normandy Invasion. He is now a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve.

Sales Leap 22% In Week Before Credit Curbs

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington department store sales in the week ended September 16 soared 22 percent above the like 1949 week, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported last night.

The new upsurge was attributed to a rush of shoppers eager to buy furniture and high-priced appliances before instalment credit curbs were reimposed last Monday.

Dollar volume, which had shown signs of slackening here in the previous two weeks now are on the uptrend again. For the four weeks ended September 16, local store sales were reported 7 percent higher than in the corresponding period last year.

The gain was Nationwide. Biggest spurt in sales came in the Atlanta district where dollar volume was 36 percent above the like 1949 week. Smallest was in the Philadelphia district, up 6 percent for the week. The Richmond district, including Washington, showed a 10 percent upturn despite a 3 percent dip in Baltimore.

Meanwhile, Dun & Bradstreet indicated that the stepped-up buying pace continued this week even after imposition of consumer credit controls. Another source pointed out that higher prices on many items contributed to the gain.

McLeery Formula

Video Show Turns To Theater-in-Round

JUST BECAUSE people are accustomed to sitting in theaters facing stages framed by prosceniums (and looking at actors from only one direction, is no reason why the old rules should apply in television.

At least that's the opinion of Albert McCleery, an NBC television director who comes from Kansas.

The average television drama, McCleery has been known to say, is often a mere photographing of a stage show performed on a traditional set. In "Cameo Theater," which he produces and directs every Wednesday (8:30 p. m., WNBW) he is making an attempt to break away from what he calls the "tyranny" of the proscenium arch and present television as theater-in-the-round.

HE PHOTOGRAPHS his actors from many angles, takes the audience anywhere its imagination is capable of taking it. He uses no scenery, almost no props. "This week we use only a rocking-chair, a coffee cup, a stiletto and an American Flag," he says.

"Don't think the movies aren't under the tyranny of the proscenium arch, either," McCleery says. "Movie directors think of little boxes. As if God is looking in through a window. Why can't God look through walls? Or anywhere else? But occasionally there is a director who doesn't think in terms of little boxes and makes a great picture."

McCleery, who sees many positive values in arena staging both for television and for legitimate theater, likes to point out the economic advantages: "The economic structure of the theater in this country is changing. The kind of theater we'll have in 15 years will be different from what we have now. The so-called American theater never really was rooted in this country, never really was grass roots, just pseudoroyal and mostly Broadway. Arena staging can liberate the theater from the restraints of budget, cutting the overhead of scenery and elaborate props,—an important consideration for small groups and it will allow them to flourish and to train new actors and new writers."

ARENA STAGING in TV is not without its problems, though. First comes the problem of scripts. "There are no boundaries to what we can do," McCleery says. "Shakespeare, Shaw, Moliere, Chekov, drawing-room comedy. But our new writers seem to think they must become entangled in the mechanics of arena staging. We tell them to go ahead and write and leave the mechanics to us."

The second great problem is reeducating the actors to think. "The movies train people to think, to think with their faces and eyes," McCleery says. "And this is something the movies do well. The theater trains people to speak. Television-arena theater combines the two."

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Either Way, It Sure 'Suits' the Men

Mary E. Van Cleave of 7019 Georgia ave. nw., notes with interest that a local store is offering: "Swim Suits, 20 Percent Off."

"Most of the beaches in this area," observes Mary, "offered swim suits with at least 75 percent off this season, and the French suits seemed to be about 90 percent off."

True enough, but I haven't heard of any of my male friends attending any indignation meetings to demand a change.

STREET SCENE

The other middle-of-the-night, with the rain pelting down in sheets, a District street sprinkling truck doggedly made its way up Pennsylvania ave., "wetting down" the street. Orders is orders, I guess.

ADD NAMES

Jackson Schlesinger of 2807 Connecticut ave. nw. reports that at the Peerless Modern furniture store one of the star salesmen is a Mr. Paper, whose boss is Mr. Wood.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Two 7-week-old kittens." (Falls Church 1732.)

"Well marked apartment-sized terrier, 4 months old." (Lawrence 6-8762.)

PET PEEVE

"Why," asks Mrs. C. F. Nix of 2200 N. Pollard st., Arlington, Va., "do the commercials on television have to be twice as loud as the remainder of the program?"

I dunno. Why do we have to turn up the volume to hear the comedian's ad libs and then rush back to turn it down again when the orchestra begins to play?

MISCELLANY

Hats off to the police for the way they've been handling 13th st. traffic during the recent construction work. It takes a brave man to stand in the middle of that stream of cars during the rush hour . . . Katherine Thompson of 3922 Benton st. nw. noticed hundreds of swallows circling the Calvert Theater the other night, with a dozen or so disappearing down the chimney at the end of each swoop. An attendant at the theater told her it happens every evening—and now Mrs. Thompson wonders whether the swallows know just when the Calvert will start using the chimney for its intended purpose—and whether the date corresponds with the departure of the swallows for warmer regions . . . Max R. Shohet of Radio Reports, Inc., tells me Ruth Crane and Jackson Weaver got a big laugh on their WMAL "Modern Woman" program the other day from my story about the woman who sliced up a piece of Lifebuoy soap with her carrots . . . Speaking of radio programs, did you happen to hear the terrific job Joe Wershba did a few nights ago on WTOP? He made Washington's juvenile delinquency problem a real-life issue that has its roots in your home and mine—and incidentally demonstrated that he's a crackerjack radio reporter, and not just a voice . . . The Prince Georges County Cerebral Palsy Association (newly formed and low on funds) is in dire need of a typewriter in working condition. Mrs. Laura K. Schwartz of 405 49th ave., Capitol Heights, Md., who is secretary of the association, asks that anybody who can help call her on Jordan 9-9783 . . . Mary Crawford of 4730 Illinois ave. has some old picture frames she'd like to give to "a shop on G st. that passes them along to artists who need help," but she doesn't know the name of the store. Anybody who can identify the store can reach Miss Crawford on Randolph 8309 after 8:30 each evening . . . M. L. Le Mon, assistant communications chief of Eastern Airlines, reports that the day after the appearance of his letter about the traffic situation on the "Virginia" end of Memorial Bridge, the Park Police were johnny-on-the-spot, and now have an officer on duty to help left-turners . . . (The trouble is, Inspector Raspberry probably had to "borrow" a man from some other assignment to take care of this one) . . . Utha Gray Smith of 207 S. Alfred st., Alexandria, Va., comments that the "famous interior designer" in those "Men of Distinction" ads seems to be decorating his own interior with a highball . . . F. J. Acosta of 1216 Weston rd., Falls Church, Va., tells me he was on a bus, seated near a Mrs. Blabbermouth who was saying that she didn't care if we did have another war because she made $5000 out of the last one. "Nearby was a little old lady with a chiffon pie in her lap," reports District Liner Acosta. "Approaching the loudmouth she said: 'I lost two sons in the last war.' And with that—plop went the pie into the face of Mrs. Blabbermouth."

THE GENTLER SEX

Mrs. Yvonne Reamy of 4335 Rowalt dr., College Park, Md., decided one day last week that she was going downtown to do some shopping, in spite of the rain.

When her cab reached F st., she sighed: "Look at that sea of umbrellas along the sidewalk. A few other people had the same idea, I guess." Her driver, Yellow Cab's Maxime L. DuCharme of 3818 Allison st., Brentwood, Md., replied:

"Lady, I've been driving a cab here for 16 years, and I've learned one thing about our rainy spells. You can keep a woman home with two straight days of rain, but on the third day, she heads for town."

WISHING WELL—

Merry-Go-Round

Jebb and TV Form Fine U.N. Publicity

By Drew Pearson

[Editorial note—The brass ring, good for one free ride on the Washington Merry-Go-Round, today goes to Sir Gladwyn Jebb, chairman of the U. N. Security Council.]

After a month of watching sourpuss Soviet Delegate Malik rant, rave and stymie the U. N. Security Council, the American television-viewing public is getting a great kick out of a gentleman who is exactly the opposite—Sir Gladwyn Jebb, chief of the British U. N. Delegation and now chairman of the Security Council.

Jebb

Sir Gladwyn's firmness in putting Malik in his place, his precise, masterful manner and his obvious friendship for the United States of America has done more to improve British-American relations than anything since V-E Day.

Were it not for television the American public could not have received the same visual proof of Jebb's operation. As a result they rate him along with Joe DiMaggio and Hopalong Cassidy—at least in the New York metropolitan area.

Interesting thing is that this quite sincere tribute is not particularly appreciated by more stuffy British diplomats, nor by some of the British press. Harold Nicholson, for instance, writes in the London Sunday Observer:

"The frenzied publicity which surrounds Lake Success has imposed upon Sir Gladwyn the odious prominence of a film or baseball star . . . the circus atmosphere encompassing these momentous deliberations must be galling to a man of his patrician temper."

What the British press apparently does not realize is that the United Nations needed something like this, and needed it badly. As far as the American people were concerned, the U. N. was a dead duck just before Korea. Its quick action in Korea changed this, however, on top of which along came Comrade Malik.

Every good drama needs a villain, and Malik obligingly volunteered to play that part. No one from Broadway or Hollywood could have played it any better. He stepped right up to the footlights, though he didn't have to get into the act at all, and gave his television audience all the thrills of Hairbreadth Harry and the Perils of Pauline.

Result: Television users all over the Eastern part of the U.S.A. were glued to their sets every afternoon that Malik was acting.

Now comes Sir Gladwyn, the debonair and popular hero, the man who rescues the U. N. from the clutch of Comrade Malik. No wonder he has become like Hopalong Cassidy or Joe DiMaggio.

'Jebb-Propelled'

Sir Gladwyn doesn't seem to mind the so-called circus atmosphere of Lake Success, despite the British press and despite the fact that he was reared as a career diplomat and prefers a life of easy tempo and pleasant indulgence. He likes Italian cooking, French wines, British country-house conversation, and, for physical exercise, a gentlemanly game of croquet.

The thing that has made him "Jebb-propelled" in America, however, is his burning desire to save the United Nations from Soviet strangulation.

Sir Gladwyn happens to be one of the U. N. founding fathers. In fact, it was Jebb, in a facetious moment at Yalta, when the Big Three couldn't agree on a date for the San Francisco conference, who suggested April 25—and it was agreed.

The reason: April 25 is his birthday.

Born April 25, 1900, Jebb has seen 50 years of tumultuous times, including two world wars. But he does not think another is inevitable. He recalls that in the late 30s, he felt sure war would come. But now he feels the Soviets are not ready, and never will get to the point of readiness so long as the Western world continues its rapid movement toward joint defense.

And he seems to be aware that the television cameras play their part in this effort. When the bright lights go up, in the Council chamber at Lake Success, Jebb winces inwardly and wonders if some members will now ask to speak who had no intention of speaking.

But outwardly, he shows no sign of displeasure at a modern medium which is accomplishing what the European powers failed to accomplish in the days of the League of Nations—awakening the American public to its role in international affairs.

As for his being a star of American television, Jebb reflects with a wry smile that, if the debate switched from Korea to Ireland, his popularity might vanish over night.

Jabs by Jenner

As the Senate Armed Services Committee listened to Gen. George Marshall answer Senator William Jenner's questions on his fitness to be Secretary of Defense, GOP Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon bustled in late. Only vacant seat on the Republican side was next to Jenner. Morse looked at the seat, then at Jenner. With an obvious look of distaste, he moved on to a vacant seat on the Democrat side.

Later in the hearing, as Senator Jenner plied Marshall with unfair questions, aristocratic Senator Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, also a Republican, stuttered in protest. Saltonstall's long, lean face was red with anger, his cultured Back Bay voice shook with indignation.

"I do not know how anyone, in self-respect, can ask these questions," he said.
